School Drinking, Betting Probed

Pro Gamers Attend Grid Contests, Lee Tells Board

Corning Asked To Investigate After Complaints Made by Parents

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The District Board of Education yesterday called for a report on charges there is drinking and gambling at high school football games.

Adelbert W. Lee, vice president of the board, said he has found increasing evidence of drinking and betting at the contests.

"Professional gamblers have moved into our schools," Lee said.

The board asked School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning to look into the charges.

Parents Complained

Lee said the drinking and betting were brought to his attention by parents after Drew Pearson reported betting on high school football games.

The school board official said that, as far as he knows, students are not drinking at the games, but that outsiders are.

Students, though, are participating in the betting, he declared.

Lee said it was reported to him that at a recent game at Eastern High School a man brought a suitcase of whisky into the stands and dispensed it in paper cups from under a blanket.

"He had two bottles of soda," Lee said. "He was set up for business."

Lee charged gambling is not limited to high school games, but extends to other sport events.

Racing Tickets in School

Racing tickets have been found in schools, he said. One youth placed his bets at a store in the neighborhood of one high school.

Lee said he asked for an investigation of drinking in the schools in 1946.

"There was a lot of denials and covering up by school officials," Lee said. "After that there was some effort toward control that now apparently has been relaxed."

Lee said there is need for better policing of games and in the vicinity of the schools.

Norman J. Nelson, first assistant superintendent in charge of white high schools, admitted he has observed more whisky bottles than usual under stadium stands after games.

"That doesn't mean the students are drinking," Nelson said. "We have outsiders at the games."

Nelson said that principals haven't reported any unusual behavior problems at athletic events.

"Absolutely No Evidence"

John Paul Collins, principal at Eastern High School, declared he has "absolutely no evidence liquor is being supplied or that there is gambling at our football games."

"Of course, someone or some group could be doing it underhandedly," he said.

"It's impossible to make an airtight check without searching everyone," he said "As principal, it isn't my duty to police the general public which enters the gate along with students.

"Every male member of our faculty attends the games. I haven't missed one yet. From my observation, there has been no drinking or gambling. None of my faculty has made a report either.

"The police have been an excellent backstop. No. 9 Precinct has provided us with generous protection," he concluded.

'Of Great Dignity'

Commentator Davis' Cat Given Full Honors of Death Notice

GRAY—Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Davis announce the death of their silver Persian friend and companion, General Gray, in his nineteenth year.

Elmer Davis brought this item into The Washington Post yesterday and requested insertion of a death notice, for which he would be glad to pay.

The radio commentator and former chief of the wartime Office of War Information head was visibly moved by the demise of his cat, which died Tuesday at the Davis home at 1661 Crescent pl. nw.

In a voice departing from its normally acidulous quality, the white-haired newscaster described to us the qualities which had endeared General Gray to him:

"He was one of great dignity and good humor, remarkable courage and a certain reserve."

And, in his younger days, Davis recounted, General Gray was a fighter of dogs, other cats, and muskrats—and usually a winner.

He had been a member of the Davis family since he was about six weeks old, and was the gift of the wife of a two-legged General Gray, Davis recalled.

During World War II, General Gray was named president of "Kittens for Britain," a national legion of cats who wore a gold medal and bell, proceeds from sale of which were contributed to the British cause.

In spite of this high office, Davis said, General Gray, as is the wont of cats, also liked to play with the stoppers in bathtubs.

General Gray has been cremated.

Court Delays Commercial CBS Color TV

CHICAGO, Nov. 15 (AP)—Commercial telecasting will not start next Monday as scheduled, a three judge Federal court panel ruled today.

The judges said they needed more time — possibly another month or more—to decide whether to approve or override a Federal Communications Commission order authorizing use of the color system developed by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The court issued a temporary restraining order that prevents CBS from putting its color television programs on the air until the formal court ruling.

A temporary injunction to block the CBS color telecasts had been sought by Radio Corporation of America. RCA contended the CBS color system was inferior and would cost present owners of black and white sets a billion and a half dollars to convert to that system of color.

The ruling, however, merely is a stop-gap order that retains the status quo

In New York, CBS President Frank Stanton said, "we are hopeful that a consideration and disposition of the case on the merits can be had without delay . . . so that full enjoyment by the public of this new improved television will not be retarded."

He said the court action would not interfere with the public demonstrations of color TV being given in New York by CBS, and expressed confidence the final decision would favor CBS.

AFL Union Drops Opposition To Arlington Symphony Head

Objection to Bernard Rosenthal as conductor of the Arlington Civic Orchestra has been dropped by the Washington local of the AFL Musicians Union, at least for this season, it was learned yesterday.

As a result, the 15 union members who play in the orchestra for pleasure after hours may continue doing so.

Paul J. Schwarz, president of Local 161, said the union's executive board had voted unanimously not to withdraw its members from the orchestra during the current season.

When the controversy over Rosenthal started a month ago, the local contended that the orchestra violated the law prohibiting service personnel from holding civilian jobs. Rosenthal is a Navy chief musician.

Orchestra members, including the union men, replied that Rosenthal deprived no one of a job, since he was receiving no pay and had declined even expense money.

The union consideed prohibiting its members and then withheld a decision temporarily so the orchestra could give a concert November 9.

Schwarz said the union, in not issuing a ban for this season, "has not abandoned its insistence on the moral and legal right of civilian musicians to be free from the unfair competition of service personnel."

The executive board "felt that the Arlington Symphony acted in good faith, without knowledge of the Pentagon's legal obligation and without full appreciation of the adverse economic impact of such competition on civilian musicians."

"In these circumstances," he continued, "it was thought excessive to do anything that might impair the commitments to and the welfare of the community."

Snyder Asks 75 Pct. Tax On Profits

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder yesterday asked Congress to levy a 75 percent "defense tax" on corporate profits as a party-line split on procedure developed in the tax-making House Ways and Means Committee.

In daylong testimony before the committee, Snyder backed up the President's call for four billion dollars in additional revenue to help finance expanding defense costs.

Like the President, Snyder urged that the profits levy, retroactive to July 1, 1950, be enacted in the short session of Congress convening November 27.

Committee Democrats swiftly moved to speed a profits tax bill to the House floor right after the "lame duck" session convenes, in line with a so-called "mandate" approved by Congress in September.

By a strictly party vote of 15 to 10, the committee decided: (1) to limit tax hearings to excess profits and (2) to shut off further testimony after November 22.

To cull the list of more than 200 witnesses asking to be heard, the same motion recommended that "insofar as possible" a single witness represent an industry, with a 15-minute time limit on each.

The Democratic move, bitterly contested by Republicans, was construed to bar consideration of alternative tax plans submitted by such business and industrial groups as the Committee for Economic Development, the National Association of Manufacturers and the newly organized "Sound Emergency Corporate Taxation" unit.

Representative Daniel A. Reed (N. Y.), ranking Republican on the group, called the Democratic motion "gag rule." Reed said he considered the rush action "a waste of time." Even if the committee reports a bill, he said, the short session House and Senate "obviously won't have time to pass it."

Immediately after the committee vote, Republicans pressed Snyder on whether he wanted the hearings held strictly to the subject of excess profits.

"I have just made some suggestions," said the diplomatic Snyder. "I have no intention of trying to limit the committee's research."

"Then you think we should consider alternative plans?" asked Representative Carl T. Curtis (R., Nebr.).

Snyder ducked that one. "You should do what you think is proper," he said.

Earlier the secretary spelled out the Treasury's recommendations for a 75 percent tax, computed on the basis of corporate earnings during 1946, 1947, 1948 and 1949.

Best 3 Out of 4

Snyder "suggested" that the most profitable three of the four (1946-49) be used in figuring the tax base.

Corporations thus would be permitted to eliminate their "poorest" year in making the computation. Average earnings for the remaining three years would be reduced by 25 percent. The 75 percent tax would apply on all earned over the resulting base earnings figure.

Snyder told the committee the 75 percent is much softer than the 95 percent tax imposed in 1942 on

Spain to Get Immediate ECA Loans

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Economic Cooperation Administration yesterday announced procedures by which Spain will obtain loans, "immediately," from the $62,500,000 fund specially appropriated by Congress.

The arrangements provide for the Export-Import Bank to act as ECA's agent in negotiating and processing the applications. ECA will determine the conditions and approve the loans.

They will be granted on a project-by-project basis, apparently only to private industries in Spain. The national government, however, will be obliged to guarantee each loan granted.

The procedure established suggested that ECA took pains to keep an arm's-length, skirts-clean distance from the lending operations. It pointedly announced that it will not establish an economic mission in Spain, such as those it maintains in the 18 Marshall Plan countries. Neither will it negotiate a bilateral treaty containing mutual commitments and undertakings that is the rule for all other ECA beneficiaries.

ECA had fought the Spanish loan proposal when it was advanced in Congress late last summer. Top officials argued that it would not help the United States; that its psychological effect on other Marshall Plan countries would be adverse; that Spain consistently refused to amend internal financial regulations inimical to trade and investment; and that it was not in a position to propose or participate in mutual assistance measures with the rest of western Europe.

Congress nevertheless ordered ECA to make the loans and voted a sum of money to be used for that purpose only. President Truman was not in a position to veto the measure, for it was included in the essential omnibus appropriations bill.

When he signed it, however, he issued a special statement declaring he could not accept the Spanish loan instruction as a mandate, for as such it would be unconstitutional. He contended that in the field of foreign affairs Congress could only authorize action, not direct it.

Nevertheless, Mr. Truman did not foreclose the possibility of lending money to Spain. He said he would extend loans "whenever mutually advantageous arrangements can be made."

Since then, the political necessity of moving ahead in good faith to carry out Congress' intent has become inescapable. In recent weeks it has been obvious that if Congress is to approve the help that the Administration feels is essential for drought-stricken Yugoslavia, the Administration must also give aid to Spain.

The Export-Import Bank said yesterday that it already had under consideration a number of project applications, presumably those made in previous Spanish attempts to obtain dollar loans. The Bank hinted that the first to receive favorable action will be a request for the financing of plants to make nitrogenous fertilizer.

It was not known whether Spain can propose enough "mutually advantageous" loan projects before the end of this fiscal year to absorb the full $62,500,000 of available funds.

Reds Drive Wedge in U.N. Line; May Be Move to Split Fronts

SEOUL (Thursday) Nov. 16 (AP). Communist counterattacks hurled back South Korean forces in frigid northeast and northwest Korea yesterday and slowed an American push for the Manchurian border.

Korean Reds slammed into the east flank of the Republic of Korea (ROK) Capital division on the northeast coast 90 air miles from the Soviet Siberian border. The ROKs lost 2 to 3 miles but a United States Tenth Corps spokesman asserted the assault was considered "contained."

The Reds hit with eight battalions—perhaps 8000 men—and were reinforced by a Marine training battalion which made one of the few amphibious landings of the war for the Communists.

In the northwest, a Red force of possibly 1000 men hammered a wedge 4 miles into South Korean forces in the center of the United Nations defense line across the narrow waist of the Korean peninsula.

It was too early to tell whether this indicated an attempt to split the northwest and northeast fronts.

Between these areas of Red counterattacks, U. N. forces still held the initiative but the going was tougher.

The United States Seventh Division ran into stiffening Communist resistance in its thrust through central Korea toward the Manchurian border.

Tenth Corps said the only advance was 4000 yards on one sector of the Seventeenth Regiment front. The Seventh Division was running into resistance described as "moderate to heavy" about 28 miles from the frontier.

The Reds brought tanks, artillery and mortars into action on the Seventh's front. United States Marine aircraft ripped into Kapsan, ahead of the Seventh where a big enemy buildup was reported. One-third of the town was left in ashes.

Thirty United States B-29s firebombed Hoeryong on the Manchurian border in far northeastern Korea Wednesday. An Air Force spokesman said the huge commu-

Attempts to Soothe Friends —And to Counter Opponents

This is the fifth of 31 installments of the personal letters of Franklin D. Roosevelt from the two volume work, "FDR: His Personal Letters."

FDR to Key Pittman in Washington.

THE WHITE HOUSE
April 24, 1934

Dear Key:

I remember that fable about the monkeys and the pomegranates but the true story runs this way.

"It was perfectly true that the little monkeys got on very well with their little golden pomegranates. After the big fire destroyed the golden pomegranates the little monkeys discovered vast quantities of silver pomegranates. They liked them so well that they ate dozens and dozens and dozens of them and that is why all the little monkeys are dead today!"

As ever yours,

There was renewed pressure at this time from the silver bloc for greater reliance on silver. The bloc was able to secure enactment of the Silver Purchase Act, which instructed the government to increase its silver holdings to 25 per cent of its total gold and silver reserves.

The fable which Pittman, a leader of the Silver bloc, sent to the President, ran as follows:

"There was a breed of monkeys 'way back in the Malay jungle who would eat only golden pomegranates. Along came a big fire that destroyed the entire area where these golden pomegranates grew. The little monkeys were starving although there was a beautiful silver pomegranate just as delicious which all the other monkeys in the Malay Peninsula had grown fat on; but the monkeys would not eat anything but the golden pomegranates. And today they are all dead."

FDR to Hugh S. Johnson.
THE WHITE HOUSE,
AUG. 20, 1934.

Dear Hugh:

Your letter has come just as I was going to bed—tomorrow I have to go to Illinois for the Rainey funeral, but instead of going from there to Hyde Park I will return to Washington Thursday evening.

I do this because of you—because I think that you will care enough for me to want to talk with me quietly and alone.

It is just as true today as last Saturday or 1933 or 1932 that "I need you and the country needs you"—and that if NRA becomes routine, as it is becoming in the course of the months ahead, I still want you for "more important jobs."

I am too fond of you and too proud of all you have done to offer you "futile flowers"—I want you for work which tonight you cannot see as bigger for the Nation than what you are now doing—you need the same kind of perspective which I acquired by cruising 14,000 miles! Therefore, my good friend, forget that letter and come and talk with me Friday morning early—say 10:30 a. m.

Your quotation of "Res Ipsa Loquitur" is rotten—it should be "No word is the last between friends."

Affectionately, your friend,

When F. D. R. returned from his cruise, he had a long talk with Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the administrator of NRA, who had become the butt of a great deal of criticism. The President proposed to him to go abroad to study the European recovery program, retaining his salary and title. But Johnson regarded himself as the victim of a palace plot and, a few hours later he sent Mr. Roosevelt a hot letter of resignation in which he said the proposed mis-

U. S. in Midst Of Perilous Period, Says Sec. Acheson

Sense of Foreboding Voiced First Time Since Chinese Reds Entered Korean War

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson said yesterday that "we are in a very, very dangerous period—a period which seems to get increasingly dangerous as it develops."

He told representatives of 200 national organizations, meeting at the State Department, that it would take a great deal of courage, steadiness anad discretion "to bring us through this troublous period without involving a disaster of some sort."

The Secretary was the first high official to express the sense of foreboding that has weighed on civilian and military leaders here since the Chinese Communists moved large numbers of troops into North Korea.

Their fear has been not only that the Chinese might hurl masses of men against Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces in Korea, but also that the Soviet Union might choose the same moment to attack in Europe or elsewhere.

Acheson thought a "disaster" could be averted, "but only if there is a great deal of common sense exercised throughout our country and by our country in its leadership throughout the world."

Danger "Close to Us All"

"The danger is very close to all of us," he said, "but it is closer to some of our friends than it is to us. Other nations look to us for leadership, but they look to us for wise leadership and not hysterical utterances."

Both Acheson and Dean Rusk, his Assistant Secretary in Charge of Far Eastern affairs, urged the need of removing Chinese Communist fears about their border with Korea, and about the safety of the great dam that provides both countries with light and power.

The United States must also make it clear to "the other side," said Rusk, that the United States "is determined to operate only under a United Nations policy." The implication was that the United States would not take new action on its own, such as bombing Manchurian targets, without U. N. sanction.

The audience that heard these somber statements included representatives of farm, labor, business and professional organizations from all parts of the country. Their meeting was the start of the seventh such "background" conference with State Department officials.

MacLeish Started Talks

The practice was started by Assistant Secretary Archibald MacLeish during the San Francisco Conference in 1945, and has come to be one of the State Department's most important methods of keeping in touch with opinion-forming groups. The sessions will go on for three days, with off-the-record discussions as well as public statements.

Speaking extemporaneously, as he always does on these occasions, Acheson presented the Far Eastern alternatives in this fashion:

"If the Chinese have any doubt that our influence in the U. N. would be used to bring about a

Troops at Front Have Winter Garb, MacArthur Says

NYHT News Service

Army officials said they had received word yesterday from General MacArthur that both Army and Marine Corps troops fighting in "the most advanced northern area of Korea" are now "fully equipped" with winter uniforms.

The report added that adequate stockpiles of similar clothing had been established in Korea prior to the onset of cold weather.

The announcement came on the heels of front-line reports that many soldiers and marines still had only their lightweight summer uniforms to wear despite the bitter winds and heavy snow to which they have been exposed. It followed demands from at least two congressmen that the Army explain the reported shortage.

Army spokesmen insisted there had been no breakdown either in the Army's planning or delivery set-up and that the only hardships which had occurred had resulted from MacArthur's forces "outrunning their sources of supply" in their rapid advances of the last few weeks.

Pressing Iron Starts a Fire, Then, Obligingly, Puts It Out

A hot flatiron started and extinguished an apartment house fire in southeast Washington yesterday.

In so doing, the iron kept the blaze from spreading through three two-story apartments in the Frederick Douglas dwelling, part of the National Capital Housing development at 18th st. and Alabama ave. se.

Firemen received a call at 3:40 p. m. that smoke was pouring out of the apartment at 1822 Frederick pl. se. Accompanied by Corpl. E. B. Darr of the Eleventh Precinct, they smashed in the front door and rushed to the second floor.

There they found the iron had burned—

through the board—

through the second-story floor and—through a lead pipe above the first floor ceiling. The pipe melted, releasing a spray of water which extinguished the blaze after only slight damage was done.

The fire was discovered by Ernestine General, a 15-year-old tenth grader at Cardozo High School, who called a neighbor, who, in turn, called police and firemen.

The General girl said Mr. and Mrs. John Chambers and their four children live in the apartment, one of three units in the frame dwelling. She said Chambers later told her he had been pressing trousers in the bedroom, neglecting to turn off the iron when he left for work.

No one was home when the blaze started and ended.

Millionaire's Wife Missing In Disaster

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 15 (U.P.)—The Coast Guard said tonight two persons, including the wife of the millionaire chairman of the board of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., were missing after their boat capsized in the Atlantic off the South Carolina coast.

Mrs. Frederick H. Ecker, 48-year-old wife of the 83-year-old millionaire, and a man identified only as J. Herd, were still missing but the two other persons aboard the boat were rescued after it capsized off Seabrook Beach, 25 miles south of here, the Coast Guard said.

Car Draws 4 Different Verdicts In Trips to 4 Inspection Places

Safety has at least four different standards when it comes to auto inspection in Greater Washington.

One car—taken through a District government inspection station and then through three Northern Virginia inspections yesterday—ended up with four different lists of complaints.

And when repairs were made by one garage in Virginia, the very next one visited rejected the vehicle and charged again to do the same work.

The spot check was made by The Washington Post on the last day of the semi-annual inspection roundup in Virginia.

For many years there has been debate over whether an inspection system operated by the government, as in the District, is superior to one run by a state through private garages, as in Virginia. Maryland had the Virginia plan, but then shelved it and is now considering a program similar to the District's.

The checkup began in the District. The station there said the Post vehicle required cleaning of side windows, raising of the right headlight and removal of a sticker on the windshield. No other faults were found in a check of 32 items.

The next stop was in an Arlington County garage. After waiting 1½ hours, the car was next for inspection, but the garage operator walked off for lunch.

State Trooper R. H. Lester of the Groveton substation, who supervises the Northern Virginia inspections, arrived at this point and directed another garage employe to resume the inspections.

Brothman Trial Told How Red Spies Work

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—Confessed atomic spy Harry Gold told today how Soviet spies work in this country.

He turned Government witness to testify against an engineer who is on trial because he allegedly lied to save Gold from arrest.

The Federal courtroom of Judge Irving Kaufman was tense as Gold, 39, was brought in under guard for a brief "vacation" from the jail cell in which he is awaiting sentence for stealing atomic secrets and passing them on to Russia.

The "star" witness for the Government stared long and hard at swarthy engineer Abraham Brothman and his trim codefendant, Miriam Moskowitz, who are charged with obstructing justice by lying to a grand jury. He then told in a loud, clear voice about the ABCs of espionage as practiced by the Soviets in the United States.

This story involved clandestine meetings in automobiles, meetings with a mystery man named "Sam," and dinners for two in out-of-the-way restaurants, at which friendly chit-chat was camouflage for the passing of information and blueprints which Russia wanted.

Plotters Used Assumed Names

The plotters used assumed names, Gold said. They never knew anyone in the apparatus except the persons with whom they had secret, direct contact, he said.

He admitted he did a great deal of spying for Communist Russia, although he never was a Communist. Brothman, among other things, is charged with lying when he told a Federal grand jury he never was a Communist either.

Brothman and Miss Moskowitz, his business associate, are accused of conspiring to block justice by allegedly lying to the grand jury during its investigation of revelations made by one-time communist courier Elizabeth Bentley. The Government maintains that Gold's arrest as a member of the Klaus Fuchs spy ring was delayed for three years because of falsehoods allegedly told by the defendants.

Brothman asserts he did not know he was dealing with spies. He said he thought he was involved in legitimate business.

Gold, a short, dark man with a round face, looked more like a businessman in his brown suit and brown tie than a spy awaiting punishment.

No Promise of Leniency

"I was instrumental in turning over information on atomic energy to the Soviet Union," he said in a forthright voice under questioning by U. S. Attorney Irving H. Saypol. He denied he had been promised leniency by the Government in exchange for his testimony.

Gold, mild-mannerd Swiss-born chemist who lived in Philadelphia until his arrest, said he became interested in communism in 1933 and attended Communist meetings, but under questioning by Judge Kaufman, he said:

"I have never been a member of the Communist Party."

Gold said he first met Brothman September 29, 1941, at rendezvous arranged by a Communist functionary Gold knew only as "Sam." The meeting took place in a parked car and was followed by dinner at a Manhattan restaurant. Gold introduced himself as "Frank Kessler."

"Brothman asked me about the Soviet agents who had preceded me—a woman named 'Helen'—and also about the welfare of the agent who preceded Helen—a man named 'John.'"

Elizabeth Bentley, a former Communist spy courier who turned against the party, testified yesterday that she was "Helen." She said "John" was Jacob Golos, her sweetheart and Soviet spy in the United States until his still-unexplained death in 1943. She said there was a man named "Frank" involved, but that she did not know him.

Miss Bentley Was "Helen"

Miss Bentley, 42, said Brothman had asked for a new "contact" to whom to give blueprints because he did not think either she or "John" knew enough about scientific matters.

"Abe (Brothman) said he was happy to see me because of my background, and because I was a chemist he could again furnish information to the Soviet Union," Gold testified.

A few days after the first meeting, Gold met Sam and gave him a verbal and written report "covering all the details of my meeting with Abe." The next meeting with Brothman was about 10 days later, in a Childs Restaurant near Columbus Circle.

Gave List of Processes

"I gave him a verbal list of the processes the Soviet Union wanted," Gold said.

These were processes relating to the manufacture of aviation gasoline, techniques for the manufacture of articles from natural or synthetic rubber, development in the manufacture of petroleum lubricants, information on lubricants used under high temperature conditions, and the manufacture of organic chemicals, including acetone as used in making smokeless powder and synthetic alcohol.

"The meetings continued over a period of years," Gold said, and he always reported on them to Sam.

"There came a time," Gold said, "when Sam and Abe and I met together."

Saypol did not seek an elaboration. He said he would take it up later.

Soon afterward, the trial was adjourned until tomorrow, when Gold will be questioned further.

De Courcy Urges Western World Hit Russia Now

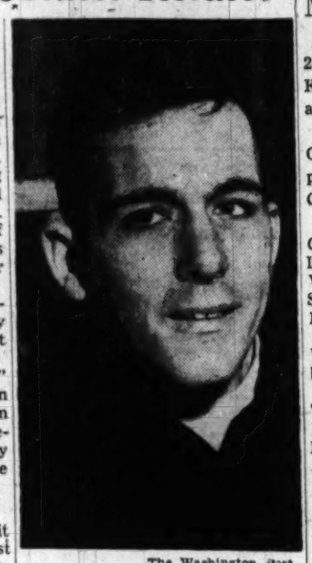
Kenneth de Courcy, publisher of a British "letter" on foreign intelligence, yesterday declared the Western world should seriously consider launching an attack on Russia.

He said the USSR wants to involve the United States in a long war with China which would "bleed us white" while she is getting ready for atomic war. A crowd of 400 listeners at the National Press Club applauded his suggestion that we "strike back" at the Soviets instead.

De Courcy said this would not be "preventive war," as the Kremlin already has "launched World War III" by attacks on America, Britain and France in various parts of the world.

He said the Western powers could destroy the sources of Russian military power within a week, by air attacks on her oil industry and atomic plants.

His Bayonet Operation Saved Korean's Life, Soldier Relates



The Washington Post
CORPL. WILLIAM J. KADIC
. . . Recovering at Walter Reed

The dramatic story of how a young Washington corporal—acting both out of humanitarian motive and because the man was needed for intelligence purposes—saved a North Korean rifleman's life by operating on him with a bayonet was told here yesterday.

The American, now recovering from a wound at Walter Reed Hospital, is Corpl. William J. Kadic, a twenty-year-old medic of 4515 Chestnut st., Bethesda. His father, Karl Kadic, is head waiter at the Hamilton Hotel.

Young Kadic was serving as platoon aid man when the freshly captured North Korean, all but dead, was turned over to him.

"He was bleeding to death," Kadic said. "His arm had been blown almost off. We needed him for information and I knew something had to be done very quickly or he would die. The only chance was to amputate his arm.

Amputation Stops Bleeding

"The only thing around to do it with was a bayonet. It was just lucky that my buddy had a bayonet which he'd sharpened good before coming from Japan.

"So I doped the North Korean up with all the morphine I had and did it. Well, the operation worked. The bleeding stopped and we got him backlines on a litter jeep.

"Right at the last I thought we were going to lose him again because we had to go through a North Korean roadblock. But when they saw we had some of their own wounded aboard they let us through."

Kadiac, a soft-spoken man with gray eyes and black hair, is Washington-born. He attended Sacred Heart School here, then Mount St. Joseph's high school in Baltimore. His presence at Walter Reed marked a round trip—he was once stationed there.

The medic, who enlisted in the Army on his seventeenth birthday, got his when the enemy laid down a barrage of mortar and small-arms fire while his First Cavalry Division platoon was moving up.

The Washingtonian had stopped to give aid to one wounded man and had just turned to help another when the small-arms fire hit him.

Wounded on the wrist, he refused to use any of his precious remaining morphine for himself. He applied a tourniquet with his good hand and was helped back.

Mt. Rainier Marine Is Killed In Action; Planned Trip Home

Pfc. Williams

Three days before Marine Pfc. Frederick R. Williams was killed in action in Korea, he wrote his family here not to send ihm "any Christmas packages, I hope to be home by then."

His mother, Mrs. James F. Williams of 3800 31st st., Mt. Rainier, Md. received a Defense Department telegram last week saying her son had been fatally wounded "in the line of duty." No details were given.

Three letters from Williams also arrived last week. One, written from an LST boat on October 16, assured the family that "there was nothing to worry about."

"The first campaign is over," he wrote, "and we are going to make a landing in North Korea. We are pretty lucky though, the South Korean army has already been through the city we are going to and we won't have any trouble landing."

He inquired about the family and told "the kids to be good," Mrs. Williams said. He referred to his brothers and sisters, Richard, 14, Andrew, 11, Joseph, 8, and Patricia, 5. Another sister, Mrs. Aubrey Smith lives in Pink Hill.

Williams joined the Marines on his eighteenth birthday in April. After training at Parris Island, he returned home for the funeral of his father, James F. Williams, who died on July 15. On August 15 he was shipped to Korea with the First Marine Division, 1st Battalion.

Before enlisting, Pfc. Williams was a student at Mount Rainer High School.

D. C. January Draft Announcement Today

District Selective Service officials today will be notified of Washington's quota in the January draft call of 40,000 men.

The officials said yesterday they expect between 175 and 200 men would be called.

December's quota was 40,000 nationally and 177 locally.

Meanwhile, about 120 District men reported at Arlington Farms for physicals yesterday. Those passed were sent to the Ft. Meade (Md.) reception center.

Yesterday was the scheduled date for the first inductions of doctors, dentists and veterinarians, but officials said no one from the three categories has been inducted.

"It would have been impossible," one official said.

He explained the call for physicians was not made until October 10. Since then local boards and medical advisory committees have been classifying eligible medical men.

When the first group will be inducted, Selective Service offices could not say.

Dr. G. Victor, chairman, said Washington's Medical Draft Advisory Committee, is now reviewing its recommendations to the draft boards.

The committees make recommendations, but the boards are not required to follow them.

Some of the reviewing, Dr. Simpson said, is preparatory to possible appeal of classifications.

The United Press quoted the Surgeon General's office yesterday as saying the shortage of doctors and dentists has put the Army's medical service "under terrific strain."

U. N. Formosa Issue Shelved as War Risk

Shows Radiation

Cheap Device Measures A-Exposure

Official Dept. of Defense Photos

Official Dept. of Defense Photos
Corpl. Doris Apgar shows how packet containing film is placed in metal case

By the United Press

A simple, inexpensive device to measure a person's exposure to atomic radiation has been developed for military and civil defense needs, it was announced last night.

Suitable for mass production for less than $1, the device is small and light and can be hung from the neck like a soldier's "dog tag." It will measure very slight to fatal doses of radioactivity.

It consists of a small metal case containing a flat paper package made up of photographically sensitized film and a pod of developing solution. Exposure to the harmful gamma rays causes the center of the film to turn light. The greater the exposure to radiation, the whiter the strip.

Comparison of the grade of whiteness with a graduated scale on the edges of the strip indicates the degree of radiation to which the wearer was exposed.

Since gamma rays are the only ones to be reckoned with in an atomic explosion, shields in the case block entry of alpha and beta rays.

An individual suspecting exposure. As it draws a plaque from the narrow slit in the case, the pod containing the developer is broken and the fluids spread over the test strip. After waiting about one minute, the user breaks open the plaque and by reading the center degree of whiteness determines the extent of exposure.

LAKE SUCCESS, Nov. 15 (AP).—Fearful that Red China's actions might plunge the Far East into war, the U. N. political committee today indefinitely postponed consideration of the future of Formosa, the last stronghold of Chiang Kai-shek.

The majority agreed with American Delegate John Foster Dulles that the risk of war made useless any U. N. talk now on a long-range settlement of the question of Formosa.

The committee voted 53 to 0 to shelve the Formosan issue temporarily. Even the Russians voted with the majority, but Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob A. Malik said his government wanted the issue deleted instead of merely postponed.

The committee then decided to act next Monday on Nationalist China's charges that the Soviet Union violated its treaty with Chiang Kai-shek by supporting the Chinese Communists. The vote was 14 to 8, with 36 abstaining.

Picture Changed, He Says

Dulles told the committee that Secretary of State Dean Acheson put the future of Formosa before the Assembly last September, but that the Chinese Communist intervention in Korea had changed the picture.

Dulles said that "in the light of the conduct of this so-called government (the Peiping regime), things we can't shut our eyes to—the intervention in North Korea, the invasion of Tibet, the great aid to Ho Chi Minh in Indo-China and the threats of invasion of Formosa—we face the situation, Mr. Chairman, or the risk, at least, that the whole area may be engulfed in aggressive war."

"If that is going to happen," he added, "then a discussion here of the long-range future of Formosa would be somewhat academic."

Reminding the committee that the Security Council is dealing with the crisis of Red China's entry into North Korea, Dulles said debate on the related problem of Formosa might complicate the Council's task.

Far East Settlement Point

Acheson had proposed that the U. N. consider what to do about Formosa in a settlement of Far Eastern problems. The problem was raised here after President Truman ordered the United States Seventh Fleet to patrol Formosa Strait to stop any Red Chinese invasion of the island.

That order, plus what American delegates said were accidental air assaults on Manchurian territory, are the two main points raised in a charge by Russia that the United States is guilty of aggression against China.

Malik fought to have the committee put his charges ahead of the Nationalist Chinese charges against the Russians, but the committee voted to hear the Nationalist Chinese case, and shoved his item down the list.

The committee has only the three items on its work sheet—in this order—Nationalist Chinese charges against Russia; Soviet Union charges against the U. S. of aggression against China, and, finally, the Formosa issue.

Malik demanded that representatives of the Peiping regime, who have left Peiping en route to Lake Success to talk about Formosa in the Security Council, be invited to appear before the committee when Formosa is considered. No vote was taken on his resolution, however.

(Airline passage from Prague to New York for November 23 was booked today for nine Chinese understood to be the Communist delegation to Lake Success, it was reported in Prague. The men are to reach New York at 6:30 a. m., November 24 by British Overseas Airways.)

Votes to Meet Monday

After deciding by the 14-to-8 vote to take up Nationalist China's charges next, the committee voted 36 to 2 to meet again Monday.

Other developments in the U. N. today included:

1. The political committee approved a four-power resolution urging the repatriation of Greek children who left their homes during the Greek civil war. The vote was 53 to 0, with the Soviet bloc of five abstaining.

2. The special political committee voted 25 to 4 to scrutinize South Africa's "group areas act" to determine whether it discriminates against the 300,000 Indian minority in South Africa. The committee action means that the secretariat will distribute copies of the act so it will know what it is discussing in talking over Indian charges that the law is aimed at the "early extinction" of the Indian minority.

3. El Salvador asked the Assembly to consider the Chinese Communist invasion of Tibet. Several delegates said, however, a problem of that type should go to the Security Council.

Our Asiatic 'Error' a Matter Of Tact, Lattimore Declares

Owen Lattimore declared here last night that America's greatest foreign policy error towards Asiatic countries is that "we don't call them into our high strategic councils—we don't ask them to participate in our planning for them."

The Johns Hopkins University professor said it was on this point mainly that his views differed from those of "official Washington."

"I have been skeptical," Lattimore said, "of the wisdom of outside powers in changing the destinies of nations in Asia . . .

"I think there will be mistakes. Looking back years from now, we may see many unnecessary mistakes and many tragic ones.

"On the whole, the people of Asia would make less mistakes than outside powers would."

Speaking before a public affairs forum sponsored by the Hillel Foundation, 2129 F st. nw., Lattimore's scheduled topic was, "The Citizen and Foreign Policy." Instead, he delivered an off-the-cuff, lecture outlining his foreign-policy beliefs.

He returned again and again to the question of the influence of outside powers on Far Eastern affairs.

"Ever since the war," he said, "the fact has stood out that whatever course is taken in Asia, the status quo ante (that is, the position of Asiatic nations prior to the Second World War—Ed. Note) could not be restored.

"What happened after the war was a continuing process of change. All long-range decisions had to be based on the degree, the rapidity of change . . .

"The United States," Lattimore declared, "has accepted the categorical fact that the former structure of Asia could not be restored. But the United States believes controlled change is better than uncontrolled change."

Europe's policies have been similar.

"The Russian view and that of Communists in Asia," continued Lattimore, "appears to be that rapid change is better than slow change.

"They have endeavored to make every change, cripple the former ruling interests, to bring permanently increasing power to the hands of the proletarit and the peasant."

The question of admitting Communist China to the United Nations, he said, is a complex one. But there were several times in the last year, said Lattimore, when the United States might have out-positioned Russia by allowing Red China a seat in the U. N.

China, he asserted, "is going to be a major problem for years to come. The practical question is, can we handle the problem better in or out of the U. N."

Lattimore said during a question-and-answer period that postwar history in Asia shows that the only nations that have escaped the Communist threat have been nations which have not received "foreign military aid or missions.

"This may suggest," he said, "that the best antidote to Communism and confusion is complete independence."

10,000 Canadians To Train in U. S. For Duty in Korea

A special Canadian brigade of 10,000 troops will soon begin training in this country for possible use in the Korean war, the United States Army announced yesterday.

The Canadians will undergo four months of training at Fort Lewis, Wash., starting late this month.

Officials said the facilities at Fort Lewis were offered because Canada's winter weather severely handicaps training in that country.

"Training in the United States will expedite the readiness of the unit," the Army announcement said.

A Canadian spokesman said the contingent, composed of volunteers who have already undergone basic training, is committed to service in Korea if needed.

The Army said the Canadian Government will pay for the cost of food and other training expenses of the troops.

Chinese Reds Enter Burma, Capital Hears

RANGOON, Burma, Nov. 15 (AP). The newspaper Rangoon Daily declared today Chinese Communist detachments, apparently hunting a short cut into southeastern Tibet, have invaded the north tip of Burma. Official confirmation was lacking.

The newspaper said the Chinese have penetrated 50 miles into Burma's territory to the Kachin village of Laukhaung and are approaching the city of Putao, a gateway to high mountain passes into Tibet.

Putao lies 720 miles north of Rangoon, Burma's capital; 420 miles southeast of Lhasa, the Tibetan capital already menaced by Chinese drives from the east and north; and 320 miles south of Chamdo, a captive Tibetan city the Chinese have converted into a staging area for the Tibetan invasion.

The government announced today the recapture of Kama, in central Burma about 25 miles north of the Irrawaddy River city of Prome, from a rebel force that included PVO and Red Flag (Trotskyist) Communists.

French Post Near Moncay Under Fire

SAIGON, French Indo-China, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—A French border post in Indo-China has come under a mortar bombardment which may have been directed from Communist China, a French military spokesman said today.

The bombardment, described as a "harassing attack," occurred Tuesday night, the spokesman said, and was directed against the French post guarding the international bridge connecting Moncay with Red China.

French officials said it was possible, but not confirmed, that the mortar fire came from China. Spokesmen said the bridge was not damaged.

India Directs 'Hands Off' in Nepal Revolt

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 15 (AP). India today directed that her people keep hands off the affairs of adjoining Nepal, whose government is fighting a revolt by the Nepalese Congress Party.

Meantime, the Nepalese Embassy announced regular troops routed the rebels from the town of Bhairahwa and "are displaying unexampled heroism and promptitude as they fight the enemy of our country."

30 B-29s Blast Manchurian Border City

By O. H. P. King

U. S. AIR FORCE BASE IN JAPAN, Nov. 15 (AP).—Thirty Superforts today made a devastating fire bomb raid on Hoeryong, railway city on the Manchurian border in northeast Korea.

This correspondent made the trip in the lead bomber. It was 20 degrees below zero over the target but 40 degrees warmer inside the pressurized cabin. The formation made its bomb run over the city of 450,000 population in 11 minutes.

No antiaircraft fire challenged us. There were no enemy planes.

The lead plane was piloted by Capt. Vance M. McCollum of Oklahoma City. Lieut. Jack H. Walker, Los Angeles, was the bombardier, and Capt. Chester Sieczynski of Milwaukee, the navigator.

The bombs went away at about three miles elevation. As the lead plane moved away from the wrecked Communist city columns of smoke boiled up through the haze.

Back at the base, Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell jr., Brooklyn, head of the Far East Air Force bomber command praised his crews and declared the Chinese Communists "haven't got us worried."

"It's been rough going with bad weather and icing conditions" he said. "We bomb bridges at right angles because we respect the Manchurian border. Enemy airplanes dart at us from their sanctuary and run back across the river. But they'll get plenty of surprises if they think they can run rough-shod over us with hordes of foot soldiers."

Lawmaker Censured

LONDON, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—Tom Driberg, Labor member of Parliament who spent several months in Korea as a war correspondent, was censured by his party today for "gross neglect of his parliamentary duties."

Radio Tehran Puts End to 'Voice' Relay

TEHRAN, Iran, Nov. 15 (AP).—The Iranian government tonight silenced Voice of America programs formerly relayed over the state radio station. The move was interpreted by Western diplomats as a new friendly gesture to neighboring Russia.

Relay of British Broadcasting Co. news programs was also stopped by a blanket order cancelling rebroadcasts of all foreign radio programs.

The Voice of America recently stepped up its criticism of the Soviet Union in its Persian language programs.

Pro-government newspapers which had been rapping the Voice for its attacks on Russia linked the ban with the unexpected firing Monday of Esfandiar Bozorgmehr as Iranian press and propaganda chief.

The newspaper Tolou said Premier Ali Razmara fired Bozorgmehr after a violent attack by the Voice of America on Soviet Ambassador Ivan Sadchikov. Sadchikov led in negotiations recently which resulted in an Iranian-Soviet trade treaty.

The Voice of America has been relayed for half an hour daily by Radio Tehran.

The United States Embassy had no immediate comment on the cancellation of the American programs. But there was no secret about the concern of American and British diplomats here over the recent wave of pro-Russian comments in the press and Parliament as a result of the trade treaty.

The ban means the Voice of America audience will be reduced drastically. The Russians broadcast 10 hours daily in the Persian and other tongues of Iranian tribes.

Over Germany

Reds Say We 'Attacked' Their Plane

BERLIN, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—The Russians charged tonight that an American jet fighter plane "attacked" a Soviet transport plane carrying ailing French Communist Leader Maurice Thorez from Paris to Moscow by way of Germany last weekend.

Maj. Gen. Vassily Chuikov, chairman of the Soviet Control Commission, made the charge to American High Commissioner John J. McCloy.

Protesting against the alleged attack, Chuikov said an American Air Force F-80 Shooting Star jet fighter attacked the Soviet C-47 transport about 30 miles west of Frankfurt, in the American occupation zone.

Chuikov said the jet fighter pilot sped at the plane "at a distance of 10 meters (33 feet) from under its right wing." He demanded that the American pilot who, he said, was responsible for the attack, be punished.

Thorez was en route to Moscow for treatment after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage. Russia sent Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky's private plane to Paris to take him to Moscow. It took off from Paris Saturday.

Czech Planes Violate U. S. Zone in Germany

FRANKFURT, Germany, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—Czechoslovak planes are flying over the American occupation zone without permission and an official United States protest may result, it was made known today.

The Civil Aviation Board of the United States High Commission is investigating operations of the Czech planes over West Germany without the required clearances. The planes carried delegates to the Communist peace congress in Warsaw.

Cardinal May Be Freed—to Die

VIENNA, Nov. 15 (U.P.)—Hungary is considering freeing critically ill Josef Cardinal Mindszenty because the Communist regime does not want him to die in jail, a usually reliable source said today.

A Catholic leader in contact with churchmen in Hungary said the primate's condition has deteriorated so much he spends more time in hospitals than in Vac prison, where he is serving life imprisonment for alleged crimes against the state.

"According to the most reliable reports we have received, Hungarian Deputy Premier Matyas Rakosi does not, for prestige reasons, want the cardinal to die in prison," the source said.

"Rakosi is reported willing to release the cardintal once he is sure Mindszenty will not recover. It appears Rakosi now believes Mindszenty will not recover and plans to release him."

The source said even if the cardinal were released, it would not imply a relaxation of the Hungarian Communists' battle against the church.

"Since a large part of the Hungarian people are still active Catholics, the regime simply cannot afford to let this beloved leader of the church die in prison—an event which, rightly or wrongly, would be blamed on the Communists," he said.

But, the source said, the six-point agreement which the bishops signed with the Hungarian government in August has "somewhat eased the situation. Persecution of churchmen has decreased considerably."

Basic Metals Allocation Seen in 1951

Anticipating a military budget of 50 to 60 billion dollars, a high defense production official yesterday forecast that there will be complete Government allocation of the Nation's basic metals by the middle of next year.

Manly Fleischmann, general counsel of the National Production Authority, told a press conference that if Congress approved military spending in that amount—a reasonable anticipation—the present priorities system would be utterly inadequate.

Demand for basic metals—aluminum, copper and steel, at the minimum—will then be so great for use in defense production, Fleischmann explained, that a restoration of the "Controlled Materials Plan" of World War II would be essential.

Under that system various Federal agencies act as "claimants" for different industrial users. They submit estimates of need to be coordinated by a central agency—in this case NPA.

The available supply of the controlled materials is parcelled out by the central agency to the claimants they in turn redivide it to the users, and producers are instructed to make the specified amounts available to the prescribed destinations.

The present priority system, under which producers of items ordered by the Defense Establishment and Atomic Energy Commission obtain a rating to get first call on all materials, is only a temporary expedient, Fleischmann intimated.

It is adequate for the present to assure the filling of defense orders. But if it were extended even to the defense-supporting or indirect military industries it would crumble at once, NPA's legal officer declared.

Besides steel, copper and aluminum, other alloying metals would probably have to be 100 percent allocated, he indicated. These might include nickel, tin and tungsten. Columbium is already completely reserved for military use, and an order doing much the same for cobalt is expected.

The NPA already conducts a sort of limited allocations program, through "set-aside orders." It has required steel producers to provide a specified amount of their product to the freight car building industry.

Yesterday, in a similar action, it instructed the industry to supply 30,000 tons of stel during the first three months of next year to ship builders, so they may construct 12 new Great Lakes iron ore cargo vessels. Their utility, in turn, is to permit the expansion of steelmaking capacity.

Failure to Buy Canada Aluminum Explained

Government officials explained yesterday why the United States turned down a chance to buy 200,000 tons of aluminum from the Aluminum Company of Canada.

They said: only 20,000 tons of it could have been delivered immediately. Most of the offered 200,000 tons would not have been produced until 1953 or 1954, yet the Canadian company wanted the United States to agree to buy the entire amount.

W. Stuart Symington, Defense Coordinator, put it this way:

"Just because you want to buy a book," he told a reporter, "doesn't mean you have to join the Book of the Month Club."

Courage Needed to Avert Disaster, Acheson Says

constructive adjustment of Chinese-Korean interests in the Yalu River, they would be very much mistaken if they thought we would not do that. We, of course, would do it.

"If, on the other hand, the Chinese have been led either by ignorance or by some other means, to precipitate a grave crisis in the world, then that must be met with all the resolution, all the soberness and all the wisdom at our command.

"We hope that is not the case. It would be a tragedy of the most colossal nature."

Acheson kept his comments generalized, but Rusk gave his intent audience the fullest, frankest and most detailed analysis of the problem that had come from any high American official in many weeks. He contended that Chinese intervention was not new, and that it had been going on, to some extent, ever since the North Korean aggression began.

"There has been a change in scale, in shape, perhaps in purpose," he said, "but that is all."

He pictured "substantial" Chinese intervention on Korean soil and "vast reserves" amassed behind the Yalu in what he called "the bomb-proof shelter" of Manchuria. He said "it takes a considerable degree of restraint on the part of our armed forces" to respect the immunity of Manchuria, especially in view of the recent destruction of B-29 bombers by fighters operating from Manchurian bases.

On the other hand, Rusk cautioned, "it is not easy to decide to extend hositilities across the Yalu River."

"We do not know what Chinese intentions are," Rusk explained. "It is of the greatest importance to find out whether the Chinese have limited objectives which are negotiable in character, or unlimited objectives which by their very nature are not negotiable."

The Assistant Secretary then listed some of the possiblle explanations of the increaesd Chinese intervention. Maybe, he suggested, the Chinese Communists wanted to prove that they were not bluffing when they announced in October that they would not "stand idly by" while U. N. forces pushed north.

Maybe, he said, the Chinese are giving token help in fulfillment of promises to the North Koreans or the Russians; maybe they are trying to protect the power installations along the Yalu, although, he said, it seems a strange way to protect them.

"Maybe," Rusk went on, "this represents a classic instance of using a foreign adventure as a screen for internal troubles.

"We should consider, also, that there may be some fear in China that the U. N. forces would not stop at the Yalu River. There may be a genuine anxiety on their part. Put yourselves in Peiping, consider that you have been subjected to a barrage of Soviet propaganda about our alleged aggressive designs, and see whether you yourselves might not have some such misgivings."

There has been some talk of a buffer zone between Korea and Manchuria, Rusk went on, referring to private discussions at Lake Success. "This is a matter," he said guardedly, "on which there will undoubtedly be more discussion in the future."

Then, suggesting more sinister interpretations of Chinese actions, Rusk asked whether the intervention in Korea was part of wider Communist activity in other parts of Asia, or, perhaps, part of a pattern of "world-wide aggressiveness."

"We do not know the real explanation," he insisted. "I think we shall discover that no one of these purposes, but rather a combination of them, is the reason.

"The United Nations can work out assurances about the frontier, or the hydroelectric projects. But if this is an attempt to gain control of Korea, the U. N. cannot work that out. And if it is part of a world-wide pattern of aggressiveness, the U. N. will not accept it.

"The United States must be careful of too quick an answer and too cimplified a solution. Firmness, steady nerves and determination are needed, but a determination, also, to operate within the U. N. policy and to let the other side know that we will operate only under a U. N. policy.

"Certainly for the next two weeks or so, some caution and self-restraint is indicated."

Rusk dealt briefly with other trouble spots that come under his jurisdiction as Assistant Secretary. As to Formosa, he said the two important points of the American position were that (1) the island must be neutralized militarily while the Korean war goes on, and (2) its future must be settled peacefully.

Urges Treaty for Japanese

He praised the calm and friendly behavior of the Japanese people under the stress of the Korean war, but warned there might be a revulsion of feeling in Japan if a peace treaty were not soon forthcoming.

Finally, he catalogued the weakness of the newly-independent nations of southeast Asia, and stressed the "grave weaknesses" of the American propaganda position throughout the Far East.

"In our relations with the Far East," said the Georgia-born Assistant Secretary, "the greatest load we have to bear is our relationship with minority groups in the United States."

Secretary Acheson used yesterday's meeting as an occasion to deny that he was planning to resign.

Recalling that he had met with representatives of the national organizations for several years, he won loud applause by saying: "I think I can say that despite some rumors to the contrary, I am looking forward to further years."

He also defended the State Department repeatedly and vehemently against what he called "thoroughly discreditable criticism" in the past year.

"I don't feel a bit defensive about the State Department," he said, "I'm proud of it."

nications center and military supply base was left a mass of smoke and flame.

The Superforts poured 40,000 fire bombs on the targets in 11 minutes. They met no anti-aircraft fire or enemy planes.

Hoeryong, a city of 450,000 is 41 miles southwest of Siberia's border. It was a major Japanese military base during Japan's occupation of Korea. Five highways radiate from the city. They lead to seaports, mining areas and industrial centers in Manchuria.

The attack was the 12th incendiary smash by superfort bombers in 10 days of a methodical campaign to wipe out Chinese and North Korean Communist army bases just south of the Manchurian border.

During an attack Tuesday on a bridge connecting Manchuria and North Korea in the northwest, an American B-29 shot down one Russian built MIG-15 jet fighter and damaged another.

Ground action slowed as temperatures fell below zero along parts of the battlefront and hovered just above zero elsewhere.

The Red smash at the center of the Allied line threw elements of the South Korean Eighth Division back four miles to a point on the south bank of the Taedong River, four miles east of Tokchon. Tokchon is 50 miles northeast of the captured North Korean capital of Pyongyang.

On the northeast, the South Korean Capital Division said it lost no ground despite the attacks by six battalions of Reds, equipped with Russian-built tanks. The Republican troops reported they closed five gaps in their line on this northernmost Allied front six miles north of Myongchon and 90 miles southeast of the Korean-Siberian border.

United States Marine Corsair planes supported the Capital Division by knocking out three Communist tanks, two self-propelled guns and twelve trucks and killing "large numbers" of attacking North Korean Reds.

A United States Eighth Army spokesman said supply and reorganization problems, not enemy resistance, have held the allies to small advances and limited attacks in the past few days.

Part of the supply problem included equipping frontline troops with winter combat clothing.

Eighth Army headquarters said Changjin reservoir and the Thirty-first Regiment of the U. S. Sevcombat units estimate that approximately three Chinese Communist divisions were facing the Eighth Army in northwest Korea, forces.

This could be 30,000 troops. A United States First Corps spokesman earlier this week estimated the number of Chinese Communists on this front at 90,000.

The Chinese units were "tentatively accepted" as parts of the Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth and Fortieth Chinese Red Armies, the Eighth Army said. Unconfirmed reports said a fourth Chinese army the Forty-second, also was represented in the lineup against the American Eighth Army.

This was the situation on other sectors of the front:

NORTHWEST — U. S. First Cavalry units entered the old walled town of Yongbyon against no resistance. Chinese troops fled the ancient town before the troopers entered. Other Cavalry units captured a commanding hill position near Won, to the east. The South Korean Sixth Division took a 3000-foot mountain pass on the First Cavalry's right.

NORTHEAST—U. S. Marines reached the southern shore of the enth Division reached the northeast shore of the Pujon reservoir 15 miles to the east.

The two reservoirs are vital links in the great Manchurian-Korean power chain.

The Seventh Division's Seventeenth Regiment, east of the Pujon reservoir, advanced 2 miles to within 28 miles of the Manchurian border. It moved ahead against Red artillery, mortar and rifle fire. The regiment lost one tank.

Maj. Gen. David Barr, Seventh Division commander, said the greatest enemy of the division was "this cold, miserable subzero weather."

Behind the allied lines, the newly-arrived United States Third Division got its first taste of Korean combat. Its Fifteenth regiment smashed a guerilla attack five miles south of the east coast port of Wonsan in "ambush alley."

In the Inchon prisoner-of-war camp on the other side of the Korean peninsula authorities separated Chinese communist prisoners from North Koreans—for the protection of the Chinese. The authorities said they split up the prisoners after the North Koreans threatened to beat up the Chinese Reds. The Koreans accused the Chinese of prolonging the war by crossing from Manchuria.

Reds Revealed Holding Two U. S. Army Officers

FRANKFURT, Germany, Nov. 15 (AP).—Two United States Army liaison officers who disappeared near the Soviet zone border Monday have been seized by the Russians, an Army spokesman said today.

Negotiations for their release are under way.

The American negotiators, however, were understood to be having much difficulty because the Russians said some of their liaison officers in Allied West Germany had recently been inconvenienced.

The British Foreign Office disclosed today it has turned down a Russian offer to "ransom" a Royal Air Force officer and an Army enlisted man held captive in Soviet-occupied East Germany by turning a Soviet officer refugee over to the Russians.

The British recently arrested a Russian liaison officer by mistake. They released him with a formal apology, but Russian feelings were believed ruffled by the error.

Air Commercial Revulsion Aired

OTTAWA, Nov. 15 (AP)—Radio advertisers in the United Staes are making their commercials more obnoxious, the director-general of programs for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., E. L. Bushnell, contended today.

Bushnell told a luncheon meeting of the Ottawa Advertising and Sales Club that Canadian advertisers should avoid modeling their commercials on those heard in the United States.

Many, he said, have been so offended by radio advertising that they have sworn not to buy the advertised products and some, he added, even gave up listening to radio.

France Urges 6000 German Unit Limit

PARIS, Nov. 15 (U.P.)—France proposed tonight that complete German fighting units of about 6000 men each be included in divisions of a western European army.

The proposal, intended to break a deadlock over the extent to which Germany is to be permitted to rearm, was submitted to a meeting of representatives of the Atlantic defense pact council.

Germany would be permitted to form its units—corresponding to an American army combat team—with artillery and tanks. The units would be combined with similar units from other western European countries to form complete divisions.

The proposal was a big concession for France, which firmly opposed the American plan to arm 10 German divisions. France had insisted that any German units must not exceed 3000 men.

Reynaud Demands Union 'Even Without England'

PARIS, Nov. 15 (AP).—Ex-Premier Paul Reynaud demanded the formation of a United Europe "even without England."

He clashed in a bitter National Assembly debate with Socialist Guy Mollet, Minister for European Affairs. He accused Mollet of following a policy of "socialism first" in emphasizing British opposition to unification plans.

Reynaud said that the effort to bring all of Europe into a supranational organization would result in nothing being done at all.

"A united Europe," he said, "is the sole means of rearming Germany without danger. There are some people who think we have 20 years to make a united Europe. I do not know if we have 20 weeks."

Mollet same back strongly against what he called a "limited Europe."

Ex-Premier Paul Ramadier another Socialist, also opposed Reynaud, who is an independent conservative. Ramadier warned against dividing the continent into what he called a "Vatican Europe" and a Protestant Europe."

Earlier today Defense Minister Jules Moch told the upper parliamentary house that about 50 percent of the troops for the proposed West European army should come from France.

Jet Engine Improved for New Fighter

By James J. Strebig

LYNN, Mass., Nov. 15 (AP)—The first jet engines equipped to ward off ice and also carrying an extra kick for power spurts will go into a new all-weather fighter, the General Electric Co. announced today.

The plane is the North American F-86D (formerly F-95), a modification of the F-36 Sabre, holder of the world speed record at 671 miles an hour.

The F-86D has a redesigned nose incorporating radar for searching out an enemy in the dark. The fuselage has been lengthened to permit an afterburner or jet booster in the tail. Such boosters add as much as 40 percent more power.

The engine for the plane is the General Electric J-47-17. New features include:

An electronic control system which designers said gives the pilot single-lever control for both the engine and the afterburner.

Hot air heating of critical parts in the nose of the engine to eliminate the danger of loss of power due to icing. This has been one of the serious problems of jet operations.

A design which engineers said reduces the use of critical materials such as cobalt, tungsten, titanium, nickel and chromium by about one-third without sacrificing efficiency or endurance.

Increased performance which sends power well above the announced rating of "more than" 5200 pounds thrust for present J-47 engines. Officials declined, for security reasons, to state the power of the J-47-17 engine and its conventional mate, the J-47-23, but their thrust is believed to be well over 6200 pounds without boosters.

Is he the KEY to World War III?

There are 60,000 Red Chinese soldiers already in Korea. But there are far more sinister aspects to the whole Far Eastern crisis:

Is Chinese intervention part of a basic Russian plan to set off World War III?

Or is it merely native Chinese strategy to gain limited objectives in Asia?

As the diplomatic world gropes for the answers to these and other questions, NEWSWEEK brings you a detailed report on the whole Korean situation. Why has England's attitude changed? Why have Chinese planes tried to inveigle UN planes across the Yalu frontier? Who's telling the Chinese we're going to atom-bomb their cities? What kind of compromise will Washington offer the Communists?

You'll find the answers in today's NEWSWEEK. Here's up-to-the-minute reading you can't afford to miss.

WHAT justification is there for an excess profits tax—as opposed to other kinds of taxes? What is Senator Taft's position? The whole problem is discussed by Henry Hazlitt in his column, "Business Tides," and in a story about Taft in the National Affairs section of today's NEWSWEEK.

WHEN will he go? The President has stated he will never fire Secretary of State Dean Acheson . . . but he said the same thing of ex-Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, too. The effect of the recent election on Acheson's position in Washington is revealed in today's NEWSWEEK.

WHO has been chosen for the highest office in the nation's military establishment ever held by a woman? Why was she chosen and what authority will she have? What did LaGuardia think of her? The lady—and her background—are described in today's NEWSWEEK.

WHY did the railroads of America buy more advertising pages in NEWSWEEK during the first three quarters of 1950 than in any other magazine? Probably because railroads—like other advertisers—have found that advertising in NEWSWEEK pays off—again and again.

Temporary Appointees

The sweeping changes in the Civil Service system ordered by the President on Monday were no doubt necessary to carry out the provisions of the unfortunate Whitten rider which took effect on September 1. The rider was intended to put nearly all emergency hiring for Government positions on a temporary basis. The executive order leaves the door open to some permanent appointments whenever "in unusual circumstances" it is determined that they are in the interest of the Government. After December 1, however, most appointments will be temporary. The net result, we think, will be to create needless uncertainty and confusion in the ranks of Federal personnel and to make more difficult the vital task of recruitment for Government service.

It is a mistake to equate the current situation with the one that existed immediately after Pearl Harbor. When the Government found it necessary to expand prodigiously at the beginning of the war, there was a rush of civilians eager to enlist in Government service "for the duration." The temporary status properly imposed on them at that time was no hindrance to recruitment, since many of them intended to go back to private employment as soon as the war terminated. The situation today is not comparable: we are not actually in a shooting war, but the present emergency is of a character likely to endure indefinitely. We are in for big government for a long time to come, and we need to hire men and women intent upon making government work a career.

The Government is now energetically seeking qualified personnel. It will be able to find them much more easily if it can offer them a reasonable assurance of tenure. We heartily applaud those portions of the executive order that give reemployment rights to transferees and that make competitive examinations continuously open to applicants. But we very much doubt the wisdom of treating the emergency as though it were likely to be over in anything resembling a near future. And, while we are about it, let us again say that the urgency of the times simply does not permit the present wait—five weeks at the minimum—for "clearing" men who are being recruited for emergency duty in Washington.

Majority Leader

No one in the Senate seems to have a yearning for the position of majority leader left vacant last week by the defeat of Senator Lucas. Senator O'Mahoney has been prominently mentioned, and it is generally agreed that he would make an able leader, but he insists that Senator Russell of Georgia is the ideal man for the post. Mr. Russell replies that he is not interested. He will be satisfied to step into Senator Tydings' shoes as chairman of the Armed Services Committee. Senators Anderson and McFarland have also been mentioned, apparently without arousing any marked enthusiasm on their part.

It would be superficial to suppose that this coolness toward the majority leadership is entirely a result of Senator Lucas' defeat. Mr. Lucas would doubtless have gone down if he had never served as leader. Rather, we surmise, it is the anomalous position that the majority leader has come to occupy which gives pause to men of Senator O'Mahoney's caliber. For the majority leader is looked upon as a sort of errand boy for the White House rather than as the key man in a cohesive body of legislators representing the majority party in the Senate. If he opposes a measure that the President is sponsoring, as Senator Lucas sometimes did, he is accused of betraying his party. And if he becomes merely a pleader for the White House point of view, he is likely to lose the confidence of his colleagues. No leader should be placed in such a predicament.

The chief difficulty, as we see it, is the want of any central vehicle for leadership in the Senate. Under the Congressional Reorganization Act, both the majority and minority have policy committees, but the actual functions of leadership and policy-making are still widely diffused. Democratic Senators owe their committee assignments, for example, to the Steering Committee. A well-knit organization would place the selection of both committee members and chairmen in the hands of a single leadership committee. This is strongly urged in the recent report of the Committee on Political Parties of the American Political Science Association. Of course, the single leadership committee would also have control over the legislative program.

Leaders of such cohesive party groups in both the Senate and House would be able to meet with the President and work out a legislative program for each session. The majority leader would become the spokesman for his party in the Senate instead of being looked upon as an agent of the President in promoting White House wishes. The difference would be immense because, with a well organized Senate, the leader would play an important part in shaping the program that he would be expected to sponsor. The legislation passed might not be very different in the end, but friction and misunderstanding could be greatly reduced, and the country would be much nearer to attainment of responsible party government.

Excess Zeal

The House Ways and Means Committee may be theoretically correct in taking up the question of the excess profits tax at this "lame duck session" and eschewing consideration of substitutes. But there is a higher duty in devising higher taxation which will do the least damage to the productive process in the present emergency. It is to be hoped, in view of this, that action will be deferred, so that arguments will get a chance over emotions, and the wisest policy be adopted for raising the money to finance preparedness. Recently the National Association of Manufacturers published a study by its tax consultant, Dr. Harley L. Lutz, explaining why excess profits taxation is unfair in its incidence and tends to retard economic growth by siphoning off profits above an arbitrarily fixed level. His opinion, supported by a wealth of detailed proof that the tax is inequitable, a deterrent to growth and innovation, and contributory to inflation, is shared by the Committee for Economic Development. The NAM and the CED agree that American business must bear a fair share of the increased taxation made necessary by the new defense program. Their purpose is not to lighten the tax burden of industry, but to attract support for alternative and sounder methods of corporate taxation—an altogether estimable aim.

The CED points out that there is no "good" way to tax corporate profits as such, because there is no possible way of relating the tax burden to the income status of the people who bear it. The $1000 stockholder, for example, pays the same rate on a dollar of earned corporate income as the million dollar stockholder. Furthermore, corporate profits are taxed twice, once when earned by the corporation and a second time when received by the stockholders in the form of dividends—a highly inequitable system of double taxation. However, in view of the necessity of raising additional revenue, a thoroughgoing reform at this time of the corporate tax system is neither politically nor economically feasible. The CED, therefore, is primarily concerned with the problem of finding the least objectionable method of increasing taxes on corporate profits. Accordingly it recommends as a substitute for an excess profits tax an additional defense tax imposed at a flat rate on all corporate profits.

A tax of this kind would avoid the extremely high marginal rates of the excess profits which would encourage corporations to spend their potential earnings for non-essential purposes, thus bidding up prices of goods and services. As the CED policy statement says, "The fact that excess-profits taxation was an incentive to extravagant expenditure for travel and advertising, was a national joke and a national scandal during the last war." A flat rate tax would be much less of a handicap to new and growing business than an excess profits tax. It would also be much easier to administer, while rates could be raised or lowered, depending on the size of Government expenditures and the amount of additional revenue required to cover them. Moreover, undue or excess profits from defense contracts could be prevented by effective negotiation and renegotiation procedures. Senator George, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who in the past has indorsed both the proposal for a flat percentage increase in taxes on corporate profits and full use of renegotiation powers, concludes, as does the CED, that more revenue could be obtained by such means than by an excess profits tax.

To be sure, a mandate has been given to the House committee to come up with a measure to tax excess profits. Chairman Doughton is thus right in saying that, in view of this, substitutes could not be considered. However, the subject is so intimately related to the issue of production—the first essential of the present emergency program—that elementary statesmanship requires that the problem be remitted to the next Congress, so that it can be adjudged afresh in the light of all the arguments—and experience.

FAO's Course

When the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization voted last year to move its headquarters to Rome, it in effect relinquished its prospect of becoming an operating agency in managing world food surpluses. The principal food exporting members, apart from Australia, are in the Western Hemisphere. As a practical matter, they simply are not going to entrust the control of their exports to a body far removed from their own soil and close under the influence of importing nations. This was demonstrated again last week in the rejection of FAO Director-General Dodd's plan for an international food allocation board.

The move to Rome, we believe, was a cardinal mistake, and many FAO members are now beginning to rue it. In part the move resulted from a desire to spread U. N. activities to other countries and to save dollars, in part from a feeling—whether justified or not—that the United States was lukewarm toward having FAO stay here. The result, however, is to remove FAO from proximity to the immense store of information available in the United States Department of Agriculture. In effect it has downgraded the importance of FAO. Meanwhile, there has been criticism of loose management in FAO. Some persons believe that while FAO has many first-rate experts, it suffers from lack of precise determination of functions. The failure of the U. N. to make more use of FAO for Korea, as we urged last July, may be interpreted as lack of confidence in the agency's operating capabilities.

Part of the difficulty arises from FAO's great financial dependence upon the United States—and the apparent willingness of other members to increase that dependence. Under the new budget this country will be furnishing some 30 percent of FAO's funds. Moreover, so far there have been no really big surpluses to manage. With the demands of mobilization and the threat of war, there is an understandable feeling in the Government that American food exports can be handled more satisfactorily on a bilateral basis. If the time comes when surpluses are unmanageable, the international distribution scheme may find a more receptive climate.

We have some sympathy with the plaint voiced by Mr. Gardner Jackson, on the opposite page, that all this tends merely to forestall further the ideal of genuine multilateral trade. The fact is, however, that real multilateral trade in food is at best difficult in a world dominated by a few producers, and in the present crisis the international food board is premature. Those who say the rejection reduces FAO to a research organization do it an injustice. There is great value to an agency which can make known world food needs in accurate statistics and can actively promote technical assistance—and great value, too, in many-nation representation in such an enterprise. When the FAO demonstrates that it can handle such a program satisfactorily, there will be time to talk of enlarging its functions.

Wallace On China

Mr. Henry Wallace is certainly making up for lost time. Speaking last Sunday in the Community Church in New York, Mr. Wallace called upon his compatriots to arm themselves to the teeth against further Stalinist aggression and to remain in that condition until the aggressors come to terms.

The terms proposed by Mr. Wallace are that the leaders in Moscow and Peking give some real guarantees of an intention to keep the peace instead of merely exploiting the desire for peace in the interest of their own propaganda. Mr. Wallace has just about washed his hands of Mao Tze-tung, and is ready to oppose the recognition of Communist China by the United Nations, a cause of which he was formerly a fervent advocate. The reason for this volte face is the Chinese Communist intervention in Korea. It is obvious, said Mr. Wallace, that the Kremlin is using Mao Tze-tung and his forces as a means of "heating up the cold war." While Moscow drafts its Stockholm petitions and organizes its peace conferences with one hand, with the other it pushes the button that sets off the Korean conflagration. With another button it embroils the Chinese in the conflict, with yet another button it sets the forces in motion for the invasion and conquest of Tibet.

Belated as Mr. Wallace's disenchantment with Mao Tse-tung may have been, it was nevertheless earlier than some. He could cite at least the example of Pandit Nehru. Mr. Nehru's change of heart did not come until Communists invaded Tibet and thereby threatened the frontiers of India, putting an end to his dream of Indian hegemony in Asia by playing off the Communists against the West.

But while Mr. Wallace appears to have abandoned all his hopes, once so confidently expressed, that Mao Tze-tung would follow the example of Marshal Tito and assert his independence of the Kremlin, there remain the Chinese people themselves, whose temperament and tradition should dispose them to resist domination by Russia, especially when they discover that the price of Russian domination will be "decades of war" and of "producing guns to fight the United States rather than tractors to feed [the Chinese] people."

The pity of it all, as Mr. Wallace suggested, is that a strong, independent and prosperous China would be "a real threat to Soviet Asia." This is true enough, but whether China has ever, since the decline of the Manchu dynasty, been capable of being welded into such a power is another matter.

There is no doubt, however, that the modern Japanese empire, while it lasted, was "a real threat" to any Russian domination of Asia. Thus Mr. Wallace seems almost to have got his clutch at last upon a profound historical truth ignored by the Western war leaders in their infatuation with the formula of "unconditional surrender." The truth is simply that the more powers there are in the world, the easier the task of preserving peace among them, since a threatening growth on the part of one can be offset by realignments among the others.

HIS WIFE

She suddenly woke at the night's noon
And found no other life than hers.
A wind was seething in the firs,
The stained clouds fled across the moon.

The pillow was too white, the shade
In the room's depths, too black. There lay
The thing she had escaped all day.
It watched her and she was afraid:

The longing that took savage form,
Caught her and shook her, stopped her throat;
She lay alone and heard, remote,
Nearer, than here, the rushing storm.

No Pardon

It seems that one Virginian (letter published November 9) has a rather distorted version of justice the American way. It would indeed be a gesture "if the President, when the time comes, were to have the man who tried to kill him pardoned and deported," but this American fails to see the inspiration for such an "inspired gesture." What is overlooked in this passage is that the President has no direct charge against Mr. Callazo. Perhaps a conspiracy to overthrow the Government of the United States by force could be revealed, but this is for governmental action. Mr. Callazo is now facing indictment for murder of Pvt. Coffelt of the White House guards.

In admitting there is no precedent, the air is let out of the Virginian's balloon. Not only would such an act by the President be without precedent, but would also overrule many long established precedents not to mention laws making murder a crime punishable by law.

Under the American system which has worked through the past years, any would-be assassin will be subjected to grand jury indictment. This is now the case in the recent assassination attempt.

Let us make the horrible assumption that the would-be assassin were pardoned. Where would he be deported as the Virginian proposes? Mr. Callazo, in spite of being a native Puerto Rican, is an American citizen. Would the courts (or whatever department would handle such a deportation) simulate the Napoleonic era and exile him to Elba, Helena, Chincoteague, Va., or maybe Arlington?

No; such action would not "prevent a gangster from being held up as a martyr." Nor would it "proclaim to all the world that the standards of Washington are not those of Moscow." Instead, such action as pardoning and deporting a would-be assassin, and as the case may be, murderer, would openly condone the violent activity on which communism and revolutionnaires survive.

"Passage To India"

In your editorial of November 11, "Passage to India," you ask the question "Are the Chinese Communists preparing the way (in the palace revolution in Nepal) for an assault on India when Tibet has been subjugated?" "Why should China be interested in Nepal?" After some discussion of the geography and the people of Nepal (the fierce Gurkhas) you reach the conclusion: "The entire country is still too primitive and hemmed in to be hospitable to communism."

May I quote from page 61-62 of a remarkable book written in 1912? The book is "Day of the Saxon," by Homer Lea:

"The boundaries of nations in a military sense are divisible into three classes and are subject to a like number of military distinctions in their defense: (1) When the frontiers are contiguous with the frontiers of a more powerful military state; (2) when the frontiers are contiguous with those of a weaker military state; (3) when the frontiers are those of a decadent state, intervening between the aggressive and defensive states.

"India, however, is only concerned with the third condition, which has heretofore (i.e., before 1912) received little or no consideration in military science. We, therefore, lay down this axiom; that when the frontiers of a nation are contiguous with those of a militarily decadent state (in this case Tibet) intervening between it and a convergent power, then that decadent state, or such portions of it as determined by strategic considerations, must be occupied, tentatively or otherwise, as soon as the intention of the aggressive state is ascertained.

"When such a condition exists, the power which is able to seize, prior to war, the extreme frontier of the buffer state secures an advantage."

This is only one small quotation from this remarkable book, which shows Russia's history of aggression that began in 1482 when the Muscovite duchies were amalgamated under Ivan Basilovitz, or John III, and have continued steadily since until a territory of 200,000 square miles and a few million people has grown into an area covering one-fifth of the earth's land surface and two fifth's of the earth's population.

If this doesn't answer your question "Why should China be interested in Nepal?" then I suggest you get the book out of the library and read it. REALIST.

Truman Program

Truman still has one chance to pass some of his program—by bringing the Southern bloc of the Democrats back into the fold. By repudiating his civil rights proposals, Truman can do this. Since there is no chance now for civil rights to pass, he might as well. By giving up one small part of his program, he can obtain the rest. If Truman insists on sticking to the civil rights part, he can just kiss the whole program goodby.

Luso-Brazilian Studies

Beginning on October 18 and continuing throughout the week, the Library of Congress was the host to scholars interested in the cultures of Brazil and Portugal from all over this country and from a number of foreign countries including Brazil, Portugal, France, England, Germany, Argentina, and Spain. Brazil sent its Minister of Education as head of its delegation, while the former Ambassador in Washington, Dr. Pedro Theotonio Pereira, came as the head of the Portugese delegation. Altogether there were a couple of hundred people in attendance at the several sessions, and it was generally agreed that the International Colloquium on Luso-Brazilian Studies, perhaps the outstanding event of the Library of Congress' Sesquicentennial celebration, was an unqualified success.

It was a source of keen disappointment to many of the delegates that the Washington daily press paid virtually no attention to the gathering, whose importance was recognized by the newspapers of Rio and Lisbon in their lavish references to it, often on their front pages. Some one observed, unfortunately with a great deal of truth, that had the Brazilian Minister of Education stood on his head or had a delegate, in the cliche of journalism, bit a dog, we would have made the headlines. It is, I think, a sad commentary on the intellectual level of the country when we realize that events of a cultural nature do not merit even one tenth the space devoted to happenings of asserted greater "news value." Reuther On Installment Credit

Donald Montgomery, director of the United Auto Workers' Washington office, objects to my "warped" and "false" treatment of Walter Reuther's protests against tight installment curbs (column of October 25). I said that Reuther's position was "understandable." Tight auto credit might cause unemployment, a drop in union dues, and hence a reduction in Reuther's bargaining strength. I noted that the UAW made similar objections to auto curbs prior to Pearl Harbor.

To that, Montgomery replied in a letter published in your issue of November 2: "Before World War II, Reuther was the first to demand—in August, 1940—that auto plants be converted to plane production. The industry said no to this and the Government said nothing. Production of cars continued through 1941, costing many vital months of plane, tank and gun production in auto plants.

"Ignoring this record, Livingston says that the UAW-CIO squawked to President Roosevelt when the order to stop auto production was issued. This, if true, might support Livingston's case against Reuther, but it happens to be false."

The official Government history of war production, published in 1947 by the Civilian Production Administration (formerly War Production Board), makes this comment: "Reuther argued that the automobile industry was actually using only half of its potential capacity, and that the unused half, by adapting facilities and machines, could be tooled up to produce 500 fighting planes a day within six months time. Labor was no more eager than was management to curtail civilian production, and the Reuther plan would merely have superimposed the production of military aircraft upon the normal output of civilian cars."

On July 20, 1941, R. J. Thomas, then president of the UAW, sent a message to President Roosevelt protesting a proposed 50 percent curtailment of auto production, as follows: "We are wholly for national defense, but seriously doubt that a sharp cut is necessary or advisable at this time, before machinery and manpower made idle can be utilized for defense production."

The following day Reuther announced that a UAW committee will "vigorously oppose immediate drastic curtailment," according to a United Press dispatch from Detroit.

All during that period, labor was fearful of conversion unemployment just as, subsequently, labor was fearful of reconversion unemployment. Reuther, as an intelligent, foresighted labor leader, wanted to mesh the decline in peacetime production with a rise in war production. His views then of what was good for the Nation were influenced by what was good for the union. What man's attitudes are beyond the influence of his own interests and problems?

And today, in opposing a stringent Regulation W, I believe Reuther is immediately concerned with disemployment — as he should be. That's his responsibility. He is less directly concerned with the larger problem of inflation.

But that is beside the main point of this letter, which is to answer the question, who is "falsifying" history — Montgomery or I? J. A. LIVINGSTON.

Incompetency, Rising Threat

By Malvina Lindsay

Toll Of Rearmament

THE GENERAL grab for office workers, caused by defense hiring, is again putting half-trained youth in a sellers' market. And this at a time when lowered standards of wartime and of the postwar boom had left a backwash of sloppy, irresponsible job hunters just beginning to awaken to the economic facts of life!

Teen-age girls just out of high school (or even still in it), who have some knowledge of typing and shorthand, are reported the queens of the labor market as Government agencies and private employers bid for their services. And a boy can quit high school and find many an office force ready to kowtow to him if he will consent to run their errands.

So far the service trades haven't been hit too hard, but as the draft and war industries make inroads on their help, they too may be reaching out for whatever they can get. Household workers will be at even more of a premium than now. And the shortage of elementary school teachers, of nurses, social workers, will be accentuated, with possibly acceptance of lowered standards.

Most at stake here is the teen-ager's future in a competitive economy. This is concerning educators and some employers. For even though the armed camp status of this country continues for years, technological progress, increase of population, wider use of mature workers may in time shake things down toward a more normal level.

WHEN AND if near-normal conditions return, there will be great numbers of people unprepared for a competitive job market. Many of these could become easy prey of peddlers of panaceas or of "strong men" promising to set everything right.

No one will begrudge youth its present privilege of feeling it is needed in the world, of being able to step out of school, free of insecurity and fear, confident a place is waiting. But there is also the danger that many a callow high school girl, with a small amount of technical training and without adequate general knowledge and personality development, may get professional delusions of grandeur when she finds perhaps 10 jobs to choose from and the chance of starting in "green" at more than she is worth.

Meanwhile her brother likely is being drafted willy-nilly for work he doesn't like, for a rigorous and dangerous life at far less pay.

Many of the young girls now lining up behind typewriters and file cabinets in Government and private offices will try to do this. Many may try to develop and improve, especially if they are picked primarily for basic intelligence and academic standing—two matters employes are increasingly concerned with. But many unless given direction, supervision, discipline, will just get by, or worse, using their paychecks chiefly to contribute to inflation. Some will drift from office to office taking advantage of employers' desperate need for help.

MUCH IS being said about the need for housing, recreation, social supervison for these teenagers being recruited and brought into Washington and other big centers. But before this they need home and school preparation for their civilian service in rearmament.

More training in job attitudes especially is needed. They also need impressed upon them that their success stories result from an abnormal defense economy, and that they must prepare and develop to hold their own when competition stiffens. And girls of the Nation generally need to realize that their favored position over their drafted brothers and boy friends calls for a conscientious service in those civilian jobs that make business Cinderellas out of them.

Employers often are to blame for the lax habits developed by workers in offices, stores, other places where machine competence is not required. Rather than be bothered with training, disciplining, developing hoity-toity clerks, flitterwit stenographers and shiftless office boys, they either boil inwardly or get rid of them and take on another round of help just as incompetent.

If the new crop of hastily recruited workers to keep the civilian economy going is not to swell eventually the Nation's surplus of incompetents, parents, teachers and employers will need to do more to develop work habits and hold up work standards in everything from household chores to the important letter that Miss Blank types.

Thanksgiving

From the Bible: "O give thanks unto the Lord; call upon His name; make known His deeds among the people." "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift." "For God so loved the world that He gave His only Begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life." "That I may publish with the voice of thanksgiving, and tell of all Thy wondrous works."

"It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto Thy name, O Most High." "Continue in prayer and watch in the same with thanksgiving." "Praise ye the Lord; O give thanks unto the Lord; for He is good; for His mercy endureth for ever." "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. For God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind." A. M. ROBLEE.

A Communication

U. S. Slights FAO's Food Surplus Plan

THE recently concluded special conference of the 68-nation United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization here took a position so contrary to the expressed wishes of the consuming and producing interests of this country (and elsewhere) that it is a matter of major moment for the public.

Led by the British delegation and the U. S. State Department, the conference rejected FAO Director-General Dodd's recommendations that FAO broaden the functions of its commodity committee to encourage the building up of buffer stocks of storable foodstuffs for war and famine relief and use in underdeveloped areas, and to establish administration of these stocks through FAO.

The fundamental issues involved were set forth clearly three days before the conference closed in a communication to Secretary of State Dean Acheson from Murray D. Lincoln, president of the Farm Bureau Insurance Companies; James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union; William Green, president of the AFL; Philip Murray, president of the CIO, and H. L. Mitchell, president of the National Farm Labor Union. That communication is as follows:

"DISTURBING reports come to us that the United States delegation at the special conference of the 63-nation U. N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), now meeting in Washington, opposes the recommendations of Director-General Norris E. Dodd to increase the FAO's effectiveness.

We urge you, Mr. Secretary, quickly to intervene so that the United States delegation at this special FAO conference will not be accused in future years of having participated in reducing FAO to little more than a research organization in the face of the world's great need. Such an eventuality would be a complete breaking of faith with the objectives agreed upon by the nations' representatives at the original Hot Springs conference in 1943 from which FAO was born.

"Mr. Dodd told the 18-nation FAO Council in its meeting as the policy-planning body for the whole FAO prior to the special conference that the developing world food crisis is the most serious since the severe crisis during the early years of World War II.

"He recommended that stocks of storable agricultural commodities be built up by the major producing nations for use among hungry multitudes of the world, and for emergency war and famine relief.

"He proposed that FAO broaden the functions of its advisory commodity committee to include authority to administer these stocks in accord with need.

" 'Unless,' he declared in his report to the FAO Council, 'the forthright (military) steps taken by the United Nations are backed up by equally farseeing action to remedy fundamental economic and social ills that oppress vast populations and drive them along desperate roads of national and international revolt, I see no real hope for peace in the years ahead.'

"FOLLOWING the lead of the British and United States delegations, the FAO Council turned its back on these proposals in its recommendations to the conference.

"We who occupy responsible positions with organizations having millions of members throughout the country cannot believe you are fully aware of the position the United States delegation is taking under the direction of the economic advisers in the State Department.

"We are informed the department's policy-makers on agricultural commodity questions, in conjunction with fiscal officials of the Government, insist that any international handling of surpluses by this Nation must be on a strictly bilateral basis. Only in this way, they assert, can these surpluses be made effectively to serve the Nation's international political objectives. Any possibly valid fiscal argument is now groundless through virtual disappearance of the dollar gap in the current war and rearmament situation.

"The position as a whole seems to us the antithesis of the multilateral policy you are following in the United Nations in military and other matters. It seems to us to do violence to the very charter of the United Nations and to the Truman Administration foreign policy now being worked out under your conscientious leadership.

"WE ARE further informed the State Department's policy on these matters is dictated in part by the belief that surplus agricultural commodity problems can only be solved through the proposed International Trade Organization. Even were this so, the hard fact is there are no prospects of early congressional approval of the ITO. The preponderance of business interests appear to oppose it, and the legislatures of only two nations have thus far approved it. They are Australia and Liberia. Australia approved it on condition it is approved by the United States and the United Kingdom.

"The FAO, on the other hand, has been operating for five years. It is the first of the U. N. specialized agencies that was established. It is equipped to tackle the agricultural surplus problem. More importantly, it has the support of a great majority of the farmers in those portions of the world not dominated by the Soviet (and also quite likely a majority of those under Soviet domination, could they but speak). It likewise has the backing of the consuming interests of the non-Soviet world.

"It is, in short, the one specialized agency of the U. N. which has a strong appeal at one and the same time both to the humanitarian impulse and to the enlightened self-interest of the producers of the commodities with which it is concerned.

"HOW effective it is and how much more effective it can become is attested by the action of the U. N. and the nonmember nations of the specialized agencies in voting to the FAO the largest single segment —29 percent—of the 20 million dollars pledged and contributed to the U. N. to develop and execute Point Four programs.

"We believe most earnestly that the cause of peace and human welfare throughout the world requires our Nation to lead in helping FAO set up machinery that would encompass the whole field of food. This means not only the protection of the income of farm people but also the raising of living levels everywhere through the channeling to distressed areas of so-called 'surpluses' and the encouragement of agricultural production in underdeveloped areas of the world.

"We are confident you will move in response to this urgent request so that FAO can overcome the temporarily disrupting effect of the transfer of headquarters from Washington to Rome and become a realistic instrument for peace and human betterment.

Victors Not Jubilant

By Marquis Childs

Republicans Waiting For 1952

WHETHER IT'S their new responsibility or just caution that comes when ambition burns brightly, the victorious Republicans are showing considerable restraint in the aftermath of their triumph. That was conspicuous at Senator Robert A. Taft's big moment when at least 150 newspaper correspondents came to hear the views of one who had obviously been elevated to the top of the political list.

Childs

Ordinarily, Taft speaks his mind with great freedom. In the past this has sometimes got him into trouble.

But under the sudden glow of the klieg lights and against the whirring of the newsreel cameras the Senator from Ohio was far more reticent than is his custom. There were questions on which he elected to reserve judgment. On western Europe he said that some military assistance was necessary, but he wanted to have the entire European program reviewed before coming to any decision.

If this could mean a realistic review of both military and economic assistance programs, rather than merely a brandishing of the old meat ax, it would be genuinely useful. In conspicuous instances the economic program has been administered with too little regard for recovery and too much regard for the feelings of those who want to preserve their position of power. The American taxpayer has, in other words, got the short end of it while the big European taxpayer has too often got all the breaks.

TAFT REJECTED the tag of isolationist. Senator-elect Everett Dirksen in an earlier interview did likewise even though he campaigned on a Chicago Tribune platform. Dirksen referred to himself as a "moderationist," whatever that may mean.

For 1952, and that's what those lights and cameras were focused on, this matter of attitudes is likely to be of the first importance. The voters in recent years have shown a strong distaste for the take-it-for-granted candidate.

In 1948 President Truman was in the role of humble yet friendly petitioner asking his neighbors for their votes. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, his opponent, appeared to many who saw him to take the attitude that he was doing them a favor by campaigning at all. Unquestionably his seemingly lofty demeanor was resented.

This year it was Truman who appeared supremely, almost disdainfully, self-confident. It is generally believed that his one and only campaign speech—in St. Louis—did more harm than good. To many in the television audience he seemed to be strutting his stuff with unbearable complacency, given the state of the world and America's uncertain position in that world.

It was definitely not the moment to boast of America's prosperity. Nor can you fool people in season and out about the origins of that prosperity. It took World War II to end mass unemployment and raise purchasing power to boomtime levels. Moreover, in the present boom there are some uneasy parallels with the late twenties which should curb any tendency to self-congratulation.

ALL THIS raises a question about the political stance to be taken by the President in coming months. Self-righteousness will not be enough. Nor will old appeals to pride and prejudice suffice.

On their side of the fence responsible Republicans are likely to find their work cut out for them in restraining the wild-eyed irresponsibles in their own party. Irresponsibility unlimited can produce a strong reaction of disgust and resentment.

In this connection responsible Republicans should be feeling twinges of conscience about how some of their new colleagues got elected. We have heard in the past a lot about money frauds in election campaigns. But there was another kind of fraud practiced this year, shockingly illustrated by the kind of faked photographs circulated by the Republicans in Maryland, purporting to show Senator Millard Tydings in conversation with Earl Browder, former Communist Party head.

The American voter in the last election reacted against the arrogance of men like John L. Lewis, who threatened to call a strike in any mine which Senator Taft visited. That insults the sense of fair play—the fundamental common sense—of the average American. It should be an object lesson for the party long out of power which once again believes that the light at the end of the tunnel is the gleam of ultimate victory.

FDR Letters Trace Efforts To Placate 'Ruffled' Friends

FDR to John H. Bankhead in Washington.

HYDE PARK
SEPT. 8, 1934

Dear John:

Secretary Wallace sends me the enclosed confidential memorandum. Keep it to yourself! I hesitate to ask Ed Smith to come to see me because he either orates or talks from all four directions at the same time. Use your discretion but do not bring me into it!

Always sincerely,

Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina ("Cotton Ed"), chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, owned extensive cotton lands and reflected the general restiveness of cotton producers over crop reductions. On September 9, Senator Smith publicly called on Secretary Wallace to suspend the provisions of Senator Bankhead's Cotton Control Act for a year.

FDR to Henry A. Wallace in Washington.

NEWPORT, R. I.
SEPT. 15, 1934

Dear Henry:

I like the manuscript of that book immensely. I hate to draw any comparisons between the author and the other author who has begun his articles in the Saturday Evening Post; but I do know that your book will live and the other won't.

As ever yours,

The "author" whose articles had begun to run in the Saturday Evening Post was ex-President Herbert Hoover. The Wallace book was New Frontiers, published by Reynal & Hitchcock. The New York Times book-reviewer shared F.D.R.'s opinion of the comparative literary merits of Hoover and Wallace, stating: "Especially for anyone who has struggled through the molasses-like periods of Herbert Hoover, it is a sheer joy to be borne along on the smooth current of his (Wallace's) simple and lucid prose."

FDR to John N. Garner in Uvalde.

HYDE PARK,
SEPT. 25, 1934

Dear Jack:

You must be an awful trial to your wife! She must be mighty tired of seeing you just "settin round." I feel reasonably certain that she would like to clean the house, get a little holiday and not see you for about a week!

However, I will leave it up to her. If she sweeps you out some morning, take a train or a plane or a boat or something and come and stay with me for a few days in Washington. If she cannot get you out of the house any other way, it would be nice if she could come with you.

In any event, I wish you would give me your slant on conditions politically. I am working hard on trying to cut costs of running things. Business as a matter of fact, is not nearly as badly off as the New York crowd is howling about but unemployment is still serious. I am inclined to believe that the voters as a whole are pretty well satisfied that we are going some place and that they still want action. The Maine election and some of the primaries have indicated this. Nevertheless, I would like to have your slant on the situation as you see it.

As ever yours,

The Vice-President was, as usual, reluctant to leave his beloved Uvalde. He enjoyed his isolation and it had been his custom for 30 years to work only while Congress was in session.

FDR to Will Rogers in Beverly Hills.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
OCT. 8, 1934

Dear Will:

We saw "Judge Priest" last night. It is a thoroughly good job and the Civil War pictures are very true to life as I remember the battles of that period!

Also, I am very glad to see that you took my advice in regard to your leading lady—this time you have one who is good to look at and can also act.

I suppose the next thing you will be doing is making application for an appointment on the Federal Bench. I might take you up on that!

Always sincerely,

The highly complimented leading lady was Anita Louise.

FDR to John N. Garner in Uvalde.

WARM SPRINGS,
NOV. 20, 1934

Dear John:

It will be fine to see you both in Washington soon after my return there.

That story about your falling out of the tree and killing a deer was garbled in transmission. As we get it now we are led to believe that you got tired of shooting deer and that you climbed a tree, fell out of it on top of the deer and choked it to death! You must have been reading about that Abernathy man who used to choke wolves to death with his bare hands.

I still don't believe you got lost. There must have been some darn good reason for staying away from camp!

The trip through the Tennessee Valley was a great success—especially the visit to the Hermitage. The more I learn about old Andy Jackson the more I love him.

Love from us all.

As ever yours,

While hunting deer in southwest Texas, the Vice President lost his bearings. Trying to locate himself, he shinnied up a tree only to have a limb break and drop him 10 feet, spraining a knee and causing some bad scratches. Nevertheless he bagged a 10-point buck with the first shot fired from a new gun.

FDR to Edward M. House in New York.

WARM SPRINGS,
NOVEMBER 27, 1934.

Dear Colonel:

I suppose there will be a general attack on relief fund expenditures. As a matter of fact, of course, it is perfectly true that because relief was in all circumstances handled as to individual cases by local authorities, politics crept in to some extent. In up-state New York, for example, Republican Town Supervisors and County authorities greatly favored their Republican adherents. In many Democratic communities the Democratic leaders did the same thing for Democratic followers.

What I am seeking is the abolition of relief altogether. I cannot say so out loud yet but I hope to be able to substitute work for relief.

If it had not been for this new plan we were working on, I think the suggestion of Hoover would have been most excellent.

There will, of course, be a certain number of relief cases where work will not furnish the answer but it is my thought that in these cases all of the relief expenditures should once more be borne by the States and localities as they used to be.

I do wish you could have been with me on that Tennessee Valley trip. The whole project is a social step of the greatest importance. I think I shall go on the air to tell the country about it when I get back.

We are having a delightful time here and I find some leisure for reading and for talking more fully with people than I could in Washington. I do wish you were here.

Affectionately,

A prominent Republican had suggested to Colonel House that Herbert Hoover be asked to undertake the distribution of relief funds, to remove any charge of politics in the administration of relief. F.D.R., however, was already at work on a plan for a vast work-relief program in place of direct relief. This plan took shape as a 4.8-billion-dollar work relief bill in the 1935 Congress. The legislation was being mapped out at Warm Springs, where F.D.R. had summoned Hopkins, Tugwell and Richberg.

FDR to Donald R. Richberg in Chevy Chase, Md.

THE WHITE HOUSE
DEC. 28, 1934.

Dear Donald:

I am terribly sorry that you are still feeling so wretchedly and all I can do is to give you a definite order from old family doctor Roosevelt:

1. Quit thinking about Hugh Johnson, Labor Relations Board and all other "problems" until you are feeling absolutely one hundred percent again.

2. Then don't think about any "problem" until you have a chance to come and talk them over with me.

I always remember President Wilson saying to me once—"Ninety-nine out of one hundred matters which appear to you and me today as of vital Administration policy will be completely overlooked by history, and many other little things which you and I pay scant heed to will begin to be talked about one hundred years from now."

If you are realy able and feel completely fit by Saturday or Sunday, call me up and we can talk about the Message to Congress, the Budget, etc.

My affectionate regards,

Always sincerely,

Donald R. Richberg, who had taken over direction of the N.R.A. after Johnson's departure, had written F.D.R. a discouraging letter stating that ill health and financial problems were making his continuance of government service very difficult.

First Nation Raising Supermen To Rule World, Russell Says

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (U.P.)—Philosopher Bertrand Russell, winner of the 1950 Nobel literature prize, predicted today that the world eventually will be ruled by the first nation which is able to breed a race of "supermen."

Russell said that man, while waging wars, probably will devote his scientific energy to the "beastly" science of genetics—the science of breeding a race stronger, more intelligent and more resistant to disease than any race that has existed before.

But by whatever means one nation gains control of the world—by atoms or genes—the result should be the end of wars, with the development of only one great global nation, he said.

Russell made his predictions in a Matchette Foundation lecture at Columbia University, offered to encourage philosophers to take active roles in world affairs.

Man already has been able to improve upon plant and animal breeds by scientific means, Russell said, and it is probable that there will be a powerful movement for applying these methods to human beings.

"There would at first be strong religious and emotional obstacles to the adoption of such a policy," the philosopher said. "But suppose Russia were able to overcome these obstacles and to breed a race stronger, more intelligent and more resistant to disease than any race of men that has hitherto existed, and suppose the other nations perceived that unless they followed suit they would be defeated in war, than either the other nations would voluntarily forgo their prejudices, or, after defeat, they would be compelled to forgo them.

"Any scientific technique, however beastly, is bound to spread if it is useful in war—until such time as men decide that they have had enough of war and will henceforth live in peace. As that day does not seem to be at hand, scientific breeding of human beings must be expected to come about."

At present the world situation finds two sovereign states haggling over world control, Russell said. There is Russia with its satellites and the United States, with her satellites, he said.

"If either becomes preponderant, by victory in war or by obvious military superiority, the preponderant power can establish a single authority over the whole world, and thus make future wars impossible," he said.

Israel Drifts to Right in Voting

TEL AVIV, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—Israel, in municipal elections marked by some violence, drifted to the right in apparent objection to economic controls imposed by Premier David Ben-Gurion's government, unofficial and incomplete returns of yesterday's voting indicated today.

Although Ben-Gurion's Mapi (Workers' Party) had a slight lead throughout the country, it lost considerable ground as compared with the January, 1949, general election, and especially in the capital of Tel Aviv, where one third of the entire electorate voted.

The General Zionists Center Party gained most ground, apparently winning in Tel Aviv, running second in Haifa and Jerusalem and taking a majority of seats on several town and village councils.

The Orthodox bloc, which is participating in Ben Gurion's coalition cabinet, the left-wing Mapam (United Workers Party), and the Progressives all lost ground, while the extremist right-wing Herut (Freedom Party) and the Communists showed slight gains but remained inconsequential as political parties.

Six persons were injured, two seriously, when a group of Arabs of different political factions fired guns, wielded clubs and threw stones at a polling station in the Wadi Nishas district of Haifa.

In Jerusalem, police were called to restore order when Orthodox zealots tried to dissuade voters from going to the polls.

The strength of the General Zionists, who control only 7 of the 120 Knesset (Parliament) seats, was expected to force Ben-Gurion to invite them to participate in the cabinet or to call for a new general election.

The central vote counting bureau expects to finish tabulating the ballots Thursday, except for the soldier vote, which probably will not be announced until later in the week.

The bureau said that about 90 percent of the electorate voted.

Jewish Leaders Visit Truman on Israel Aid

By The Associated Press

A delegation of 15 National Jewish leaders, among them Henry J. Morgenthau, jr., former Secretary of the Treasury, visited President Truman yesterday with a plea for United States financial aid to Israel.

The meeting adds a follow-up to a recent national planning conference at which a four-point program was outlined to raise one billion dollars for aid to Israel.

The delegation pointed out that "in emptying the DP (displaced persons) camps of Europe, Israel has taken a great financial load off American shoulders; in accepting the Jewish communities of Yemen and Iraq, Israel had liquidated potential sources of conflict, and in absorbing the Jewish immigrants from eastern Europe, Israel is transferring production manpower from the Eastern to the Western spheres."

The President said he is deeply interested in the situation and will look into it to see what can be done to solve the problems.

Jewish Assembly Calls For Israel-Aid Boost

CLEVELAND, Nov. 15 (AP).—The fourty-first general assembly of the Union on American Hebrew Congregations today called upon its members and the United States Government to extend financial aid in greater measure to Israel.

Other resolutions passed at the closing session urged equal religious rights from non-Orthodox Jews in Israel; indorsed the President's Commission on Civil Rights; and advocated purging Communists from government.

New East Zone Cabinet Seated; Class, Church Action on Slate

BERLIN, Nov. 15 (AP).—A cabinet top-heavy with Communists was installed for a four-year term in East Germany today with the announced goals of destroying the old upper classes and forcing the churches into line politically.

The people's chamber approved, as usual without dissent, a list of 17 ministries submitted by Chancellor Otto Grotewohl.

Grotewohl made only a few minor changes in the government that ruled as "provisional" for one year until the October 15 parliamentary elections, in which Soviet-zone voters were given the choice of approving a single list of candidates or being branded as "enemies of the state."

His Socialist Unity (Communist) Party took eight of the cabinet seats, including State Security, Interior, Education, Trade and Industry. The Christian Democrats (CDU) were granted three seats, the Liberal Democrats (LDP) and National Democrats (NDP) two each, and the Farmers' Party one. The Transport Ministry remains under Prof. Hans Reingruber, who is listed as without party affiliation.

In a three-hour speech, Grotewohl laid down a four-point program for the Soviet zone:

1. Guarantee the continued communizing of East Germany.
2. Crush the "resistance" of the Junkers (old-time landowners who were dispossessed, but apparently have never quit trying to regain their property).
3. Rebuild through the five-year-plan and the so-called National Front.
4. Compel the "Christian church" to agree with the state on political matters.

Grotewohl lashed out particularly at the Evangelical Church, which predominant in the east. He declared its leadership has "criminally violated" the constitution by urging remilitarization in West Germany.

The wedge between the Communists and church leaders grew in the past six months over refusal of clerics to promote Moscow-inspired peace propaganda.

Kremlin Feared Ready for War

ATLANTA, Nov. 15 (AP)—Russia dictated Communist China's entry into Korean fighting and the Kremlin may be ready for general war, a veteran Far Eastern correspondent warned today.

Russell Brines, Associated Press Tokyo Bureau chief, urged newspapers to provide "clear, courageous leadership in perhaps the most formidable crisis our country ever faced."

Brines addressed 500 newspaper executives assembled from across the Nation for the seventeenth convention of the Associated Press Managing Editors Association.

The editors spent most of the day in lively discussion of the successes and shortcomings of the world's largest news service—the Associated Press, a cooperative operated by the newspapers themselves.

Generally they wanted more cutting through the curtain of publicity "handouts," more digging for real facts, better coverage of special fields such as religion and health, more skillful writing.

James S. Pope, Louisville Courier-Journal, warned that newspapers must compete with television, radio and other interests for the public eye. The American press must do with words "what the television glamour girl does with makeup and the radio orchestra with a silken theme song," he said.

Brines told the editors:

"The Kremlin has proved its policy is to win as many people, as many resources, as much land, as much power as possible. Russia has started armed conquest and attrition to tear us down. The Kremlin will not stop.

He said Chinese Communists may try to hold a defense line during the winter and then launch all-out offensive war next spring. China may now have four million men under arms, he warned.

Charles A. Hazen of the Shreveport (La.) Times stirred lively discussion with a minority subcommittee report accusing the Associated Press of left-wing bias in news stories.

He cited 58 examples of alleged bias, many of them Associated Press stories on charges by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) of Communist leanings in Government, especially the State Department.

Hazen said 80 percent of Associated Press staffers in the Washington Bureau are members of the American Newspaper Guild (CIO) and the president of the Guild (Harry Martin) is a Government employe making $10,000 a year with the Economic Cooperating Administration.

The majority of the subcommittee on domestic news disagreed with Hazen on the charge of bias. In a report by Chairman V. M. Newton, jr., of the Tampa Tribune, the majority said many of the stories cited by Hazen were examples of poor and incomplete reporting, carelessness or lack of initiative—but not wilful bias.

Ford to Lay Off 50,000 Men

DETROIT, Nov. 15 (AP).—Blaming particularly a slowdown in its steel rolling mill, the Ford Motor Co. announced today it will lay off 50,000 workers temporarily in its River Rouge plant here.

The company said the workers will be idle tomorrow and Friday, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week and on November 30 and December 1, because of steel and parts shortages.

Ford said its Dearborn assembly plant was closed today, but added that all assembly plants will be back in partial operation tomorrow and all except the Dearborn plant will operate Friday. Assembly plants will work through Wednesday next week.

The company said outlying plants will be affected but it was unable to estimate the number of employes who will be involved. It said four of these plants are in Michigan and others in Canton, Ohio and Green Island, N. Y.

Del S. Harder, manufacturing vice-president, said 5000 employes in the powerhouse, steel mills, blast furnaces and coke ovens at the Rouge plant will not be laid off and the Highland Park and Lincoln-Mercury assembly operations will not be affected.

The company has blamed a slow-down by workers in the Rouge steel plant for recent partial layoffs. It said today the slow-down is continuing. All company operations, except continuous or related ones, were previously scheduled to close for two days around Thanksgiving.

Drought Hits Bulgaria

VIENNA, Austria, Nov. 15 (AP).—The weekly journal of the Cominform today disclosed that a prolonged drought in Bulgaria this year had caused "serious difficulties in the third quarter of the 1950 economic plan." The journal nevertheless claimed that Bulgaria's gross industrial output increased 14 percent over the third quarter of 1949.

7 Blasts Rock Oil Refinery

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Nation's third largest oil refinery was rocked by seven successive explosions before dawn today.

Fire followed the blasts in the Gulf Oil Corp.'s refinery and tank farm a half-mile from Port Arthur. The fire was extinguished about 8 a. m. (CST).

Three men were injured. One was not expected to live.

The first explosion came at 12:44 a. m. Moments later came a blast that broke windows 4½ miles away and aroused most residents of this upper Texas Gulf city of 57,000.

Five lesser explosions followed. A company spokesman said the loss was "very heavy."

What caused the first blast—other than that some gas escaped—may never be known. Gulf officials said one of the injured men made some report of trouble before the explosions.

The first explosion was in a unit where oil is subjected to pressure. The unit was so thoroughly wrecked an investigation was difficult.

Gulf immediately shut down its huge catalytic cracking unit used to produce high-octane gasoline.

Energetic Lesson In Postal History

By Richard L. Coe

"WYOMING MAIL," at Keith's, is one of those pictures that delves into a forgotten aspect of the Old West, at the same time being careful to stick to the beloved cliches.

This time, via the increasingly omnipresent Technicolor, we are instructed about how the United States mails took to the rails shortly after the Civil War. Stephen McNally is a plainclothes dick for the Postoffice Department and he goes through some tough spots making sure the congressional appropriations committee won't withdraw its support of the "postoffices on wheels," as Gen. George Armstrong, of Ireland and Chicago, called his pet idea.

Just how factual is the story of Robert Hardy Andrews (which Harry Essex—could it be Miss Hayes' Harry Essex?—and Leonard Lee have adapted), I don't know. But it contains, anyway, the romantic convolutions that make open-air operas such mazes to follow.

Because just when McNally thinks he's beginning to get somewhere in uncovering a far-flung band of mail train thieves, Love Dawns. Love, as always happens in movies about the Old West, is in the person of a dance hall singer, Alexis Smith, who, horror upon horrors, also is involved with a gang that seems to include just about everyone in Wyoming. Needless to say, Steve's distress at finding his beloved a serpent is matched only by the misery of her own awakening.

How, through disguises that find his face as unchanging as the numberless posters advertising rewards for his apprehension, Steve goes through a rock gang, the territory prison, the cavernous headquarters of the gang and the traditional saloon brawls to thwart the villains is shown with energy if not excitement.

With this role, McNally seems to have now made the climb from the dark, sulky villain type to the dark, sulky hero type. Miss Smith seems to have thawed out a bit and there's a nice performance by one Armando Silvestre as a helpful Indian. With Howard da Silva, Ed Begley and Roy Roberts in the cast, you have no trouble knowing whom to distrust.

"Wyoming Mail" is only skin-deep, but it does manage a history lesson of sorts.

MAUDE ADAMS' traditional reticence will probably keep her from this afternoon's matinee in New York when "Peter Pan" breaks her 45-year record for a long run in the Barrie classic . . . The current production with Jean Arthur in the title role will play its 238th performance at today's matinee, but attempts to locate Miss Adams have failed . . . It's known she picks up some mail every once in a while at the Colony, but even a one-man guard hasn't been able to detect Miss Kiskadden of Salt Lake City who, last Saturday, observed, in silence, her seventy-eighth birthday.

NEW BILLS: "All About Eve" will be the first picture since "Annie Get Your Gun" to rate three weeks at the Palace, starting today. . . . The Marines take over the Capitol with "Tripoli" and the United States Cavalry takes on the Warner with "Rio Grande." . . . Both the Trans-Lux and the Plaza will have new bills starting tomorrow, "Pink String and Sealing Wax" at the former, "My Brother Jonathan" at the latter.

"THE ORDERING OF MOSES" will be repeated next Monday night at 8:30 in the Shiloh Baptist Church, 9th and P sts., under the direction of Mary Cardwell Dawson, whose feature players include Joseph Lipscomb, Jacque Ringler, Horace Wilson, Rita Carrington, Thomas Major, Bernice Hill, Charles Hansel, James Gieman, Bertha Bragg, Aaron Powell, Martin Carroll, Mary Nell Robinson and Junius Malone . . . Shotguns Rip Policy Man In Chicago

CHICAGO, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—Gang-style guns echoed for the third time in three months today in what appeared to be a rebirth of some of Chicago's gory notoriety in prohibition-era warfare.

James (Big Jim) Martin, once a policy gambling king who now professes to be a simple real estate man, was wounded in the early morning hours in the latest shooting.

Martin was driving home in his big Cadillac when a jeep-load of two or more men pulled alongside and fired at him with shotguns. Most of the pellets were expended in the rear section of Martin's car and only six entered his shoulder.

Result of Shakeup

The assassination attempt came as the Chicago police department was rocked by a top-level shakeup which saw Commissioner John Prendergast resign in favor of former Deputy Commissioner Timothy O'Connor.

The police upheaval, in the making for some months, apparently prompted lawless elements to grow bolder.

In September, ace Detective William Drury, former police lieutenant, and Attorney Marvin Bas were cut down by gang-style bullets on the same night. Both had figured in then pending hearings of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee.

It was the Senate committee which brought some elements of the police department, notably its more affluent captains, under fire and hastened the shakeup.

The committee also had been expected to subpena Martin for future hearings, despite his assertion that he has "retired."

A husky Negro, Martin reputedly was an overlord in the multi-million dollar policy racket among Negroes of Chicago's teeming "Bronzeville."

Maintains Contacts

He said he was now in the real estate business but was known to maintain powerful contacts in the Negro community. There also were political overtones in his role as a Democratic ward leader.

When hit by the gunfire, Martin lost control of his car, which sideswiped five other autos before colliding head-on with an oncoming car. He said he did not see the the assailants and had no idea why they shot him.

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Nov. 15 (AP).—The Kefauver Senate Crime Committee heard today how the lieutenant governor of Nevada (annual salary $600) earns thousands of dollars yearly from gambling connections.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said that Lieut. Gov. Cliff Jones, 38, has these other interests: 11 percent of the stock of the Thunderbird Hotel, 5 percent of the stock of the Pioneer Club, and 1 per cent of the Golden Nugget, all of Las Vegas. Jones told the committee that the 1 percent pays off better than any of the others.

Kefauver said Jones told the committee that the 1 percent return from the Golden Nugget, lavish main stem gambling casino and bar, earns $12,000 a year. Jones paid $23,000 for his share.

The only other witness was William R. Moore, part owner of the Last Frontier Hotel and a member of the Nevada State Tax Commission.

Kefauver said Moore was questioned principally on events leading up to the passage of the 1949 law which established the tax commission. The commission has the right to license gambling in the State. Moore told the committee that before 1947 a racing news wire service in Las Vegas was controlled by Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel, who was ambushed and slain in Beverly Hills as he sat reading a paper in the home of a girl friend, Virginia Hill.

The session was secret, but Kefauver gave reporters a rundown of Moore's testimony.

Senator Kefauver also disclosed what happened to Siegel's holdings after he was killed. He said:

Morris Rosen of New York City, vice president of the Merchant Island Distillery, took over Siegel's interest in a horse race book which was leased at the Golden Nugget, and also acquired Siegel's shares in the Frontier Club and Flamingo Hotel.

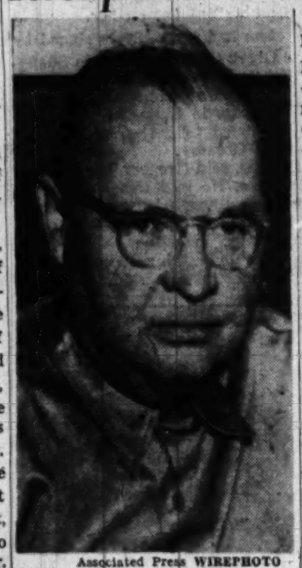
Missing Ex-Indiana Klan Head Recaptured as Parole Breaker



Associated Press WIREPHOTO
D. C. STEPHENSON
. . . identified from fingerprints

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 15 (U.P.).—D. C. Stephenson, former Indiana Ku Klux Klan grand dragon who vanished after his parole from a murder sentence, was captured today while working as a printer on a small newspaper.

The arrest climaxed an intensive hunt since August 30 when Stephenson vanished from Cairo, Ill., where he had gone to work after serving 25 years in Indiana State Prison.

Stephenson surrendered quietly and was silent on his reasons for jumping parole. He said he would refuse to waive extradition to Indiana.

Gov. Henry F. Schricker, who granted Stephenson a parole, said at Indianapolis that Indiana would bring him back and "this time he'll stay in prison until he serves out his sentence."

Once the graying Stephenson boasted that "I am the law" when he ruled 500,000 Indiana klansmen in the hey-day of the organization in the mid-20s. He wielded potent political influence and made himself a millionaire.

But in 1925 Stephenson was convicted of murder in the death of Madge Oberholtzer, pretty State House employe who swallowed poison after, she said, the Klan leader raped her on a train.

Publicity over his disappearance led to Stephenson's apprehension. A Minneapolis newspaper published a lengthy story on Stephenson this week, accompanied by a picture. Harold Johnson, of the weekly Minneapolis and Hennepin County Post, identified Stephenson from the picture as one of the printers and called police.

Erickson Silence On Costello Deal Stirs Judge's Ire

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—Frank Erickson, imprisoned bookie king, angered a judge today by refusing to talk to a grand jury about an alleged "payoff" to Frank Costello, reputed overlord of the Nation's gamblers.

Judge Owen W. Bohan charged Erickson with "evasion" and threatened to cite him for contempt.

Erickson was brought before the jury from prison where he is serving a two-year term imposed when he pleaded guilty to 60 counts of bookmaking.

Judge Bohan became so exasperated he told Erickson's lawyer:

"I'll hold him in contempt if he refuses to answer . . . "I direct him to go back and answer every other question."

But the grand jury had adjourned until tomorrow, and Erickson was returned to prison.

House Group to Probe Gangster Tax Evasions in California

By The Associated Press

Representative King (D., Calif.) said yesterday a House Ways and Means Subcommittee will make an immediate investigation of charges of tie-ups between Internal Revenue Bureau officials and gamblers in California.

King said in a statement that Representative Lynn (D., N. Y.), chairman of the Ways and Means Subcommittee on administration of the Internal Revenue laws, has authorized him to head the investigation.

The California Crime Commission said in a report Tuesday that unnamed officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau have "connections of business tieups" with gamblers.

In that connection, it commented that no California "gangster, racketeer or hoodlum of first-rank importance has ever been convicted of income tax fraud in California."

In Los Angeles, United States Attorney Ernest A. Tolin today subpenaed all five members of the commission before the Federal grand jury there Friday.

Tolin said they were ordered to bring with them any evidence they have of any law violation by Internal Revenue Bureau employes.

The commission said it had cited several instances of cases of evasion or suspected evasion to tax officials in Washington without results.

The commission was appointed by Governor Earl Warren three years ago to investigate organized crime. It went out of existence last July, but released its final report only Tuesday.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue is being asked to supply information as to the number and nature of complaints received from the California Crime Commission, King said.

Court Delays Order By FCC on Color TV

United States Circuit Court of Appeals, said:

"It is unthinkable that we can decide this issue in a day, a week, or a month. We must have time to consider the arguments of all parties, and we are going to take that the court earlier that the FCC time."

However, Samuel N. Rosenman of New York, CBS counsel, told "couldn't afford to wait" when it gave CBS the go-ahead for color telecasting starting November 20.

By Monday, he estimated, nine million black and white TV receiving sets will be in the hands of the public. He estimated this number would increase at the rate of 800,000 a month.

"One way to kill color is to put out so many (black and white) sets that the sheer weight of the number in operation will be fatal to color," he said.

David Sanoff, chaiman of the Board of RCA, said in Chicago, "of course this is only the first round, but insofar as it represents a victory at this stage, it is a victory for the people of the United States."

In approving the CBS system, the FCC held it was cheaper, simpler and gave superior color to the other systems demonstrated.

[In Washington, Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission Wayne Coy said the FCC would have no comment to make until the Chicago court has actually made a formal, written declaration. Yesterday's remarks in court did not define exactly what the court proposes to do, Coy said. Further discussions are scheduled for today, he added.

[John S. Hayes, manager of station WTOP-TV which was scheduled to transmit the CBS-originated color shows beginning Monday, said he was awaiting further clarification of the court's remarks before making final plans.—Editor's Note.]

Constitutional Convention Move Gains in Maryland

BALTIMORE, Nov. 15 (AP).—A Legislative Council committee will draw up a bill to provide for the calling of a convention to redraft Maryland's 83-year-old constitution.

Voters approved the calling of such a convention in a referendum November 7.

Senator Sothoron (D., Prince Georges), chairman of the council, said he will name the committee inside two weeks.

Among the questions to be decided by the committee in drafting the convention bill are the manner in which delegates would be elected, the time of the election and the assembling of the convention.

Delegate Lofstrand (R., Montgomery) asked the Legislative Council for advice on the preparation of a bill to provide for the election of Maryland county school boards.

Lofstrand said his county delegation is writing a bill on the question.

Commissioner Mason Leaves for Pinehurst

District Commissioner Guy Mason left Washington last night for fuor days of golf and relaxation with friends at Pinehurst, N. C.

It is the regular semi-annual excursion of the group, including former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, that has been making the trip for nearly 20 years, Mason said. The Commissioner suffered a heart attack a year ago and was out sick for seven months. But his doctor has now given back his golf clubs, he said.

Gold Star Mothers' Unit Overruled

Judge Alexander Holtzoff refused yesterday to enjoin the National Gold Star Mothers from using their name.

The injunction was sought by the American Gold Star Mothers, who said that the similarity in names was causing confusion.

The District Court jurist said that there was ample authority preventing him from acting. He pointed out that similarities in other organizations exist, such as the American Broadcasting Co. and the National Broadcasting Co.

The American Gold Star Mothers, with more than 26,000 members, is the older organization. The other group, formed last year, claims up to 1000 members.

Mrs. Eleanor D. Boyd, of Long Beach, Calif., national president of the American Gold Star Mothers, said that an appeal was certain.

Marriage Proof Lacking, Support Suit Lost

A dark-eyed "Shanghai Lady" found out yesterday that to force your husband to support you in Washington you have at least to prove you have a husband.

This ruling by Judge James R. Kirkland threw out of court the suit of Mrs. Evelyn Alexandria Gregory, 33, of San Francisco and points west.

It greatly relieved her might-be spouse, Catchick George Gregory, 56, of 3937 Blaine st. ne., who has a wife of his own to support.

The first round in the court battle was definitely Evelyn's.

She told how, in 1934, when she was just 16, she met Gregory in Shanghai. She testified that in the six-month courtship, he related that he was a diamond merchant and pointed out the fashionable hotels there he had built.

They were wed, she said, in a 45-minute ceremony in Shanghai, and went on a blissful honeymoon in Japan. Then, she said, her husband walked out on her.

She had a certificate signed by a Greek Orthodox priest in Shanghai to prove the marriage. She presented a summons from a British court in Shanghai where she had tried to get support money from Gregory.

Alas, said Gregory, the tale was untrue. He said that in 1934, he was in Shanghai, and he remembered meeting some fellow Armenians, including Evelyn.

The only thing he got out of the meeting, he said, was some drugged wine. When he woke up, he said, he missed $1400.

Besides, he said under questioning by his attorneys Kenneth D. Wood and James M. Young, he had a wife in the Philippines. She died, he said, of shrapnel wounds during the Jap invasion. His daughter, he said, was bayoneted to death.

Judge Kirkland ruled that Evelyn hadn't proved she married Gregory. He said that the marriage certificate was not properly authenticated and that the British court summons had too many blank spaces.

He commented that the story appeared more like an Oriental novel than truth.

Yale Gives Hickman New Ten-Year Contract

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

CLARK GRIFFITH'S visitor walked unannounced into the little stucco office at Griffith Stadium yesterday and extended his hand in greeting. "Hello, Mr. Griffith, remember me?" he said. The Nats' owner twinkled. "To me," he said, "you look like Buddy Myer, out of shape."

For the next couple of hours, they cut up old touches—Griffith and his two favorite second basemen, Buddy Myer and Bucky Harris, who was also a stadium visitor. "I didn't have to worry about second base for 20 years, thanks to these two," Griffith reminded a bystander.

POVICH

From 1919 to 1940, Griffith indeed had no second base worries. When Bucky Harris, the kid who came up from Buffalo, moved on to Detroit after putting in his decade in the Washington infield, Myer came along, a $25,000 bargain, who in 1935 wound up as the league batting champion.

Talking about that latter feat, Myer was saying, "I had bad timing. If I had had the weight then that I'm carrying now, I'd have been aiming for that home run title, too."

BECAUSE HE WAS ahead of his time, Myer is not eligible for the players pension fund that now gives $100 a month to retired players who put 10 years service in the majors. But he is not assailed by any great sense of loss thereby. He's a prosperous mortgage company owner in New Orleans after having made better than a modest pile as a government contract builder during the war.

The Nats first heard of the talents of Myer when he was a college second baseman at Mississippi A. and M., and on his graduation Griffith dispatched Scout Joe Engel to seek the boy out at his Ellisville, Miss. home. That was in 1924, and Mississippi A. & M. second basemen were in new demand since the school graduated the skilled Hughie Critz to the Cincinnati Reds.

"Engel stalled around so long getting to see Myer he cost me $25,000," pointed out Griffith. "We could have had him for nothing, but on the day Engel was on the train from New Orleans to Ellisville, Buddy was on a train going the other way to sign a contract with the New Orleans club. Later in the year we had to pay New Orleans $25,000 for him."

WHEN MYER broke into the majors, it was in a big way, in a World Series no less. "He joined us in time to be eligible for the 1925 series with Pittsburgh but we didn't figure to play him until Ossie Bluege was beaned by Vic Aldridge and put in the hospital," Griffith recalled.

"By the way, we were worried about Bluege until the Johns Hopkins doctors told us he had no skull fracture, and furthermore that Ossie had the thickest skull they ever X-rayed."

Bucky Harris recalled Myer's first fielding chance in the majors. "Somebody on the Pirates lifted a long twisting foul ball toward the left field box seats. It would be a big out for us if Buddy could catch it. He was under that ball three times and away from it just as much, but he finally wound up making the catch. I knew then there was no quit in him."

The Nats wound up making a mistake on Myer, though. They traded him to the Red Sox on the advice of Tris Speaker, then with the team. "Speaker talked me into it," said Harris. "He guaranteed that if we could get Topper Rigney from Boston to play shortstop, we'd win the pennant in 1926."

THREE YEARS LATER, Griffith recognized the mistake by trading five ball players to the Red Sox to get Myer back. "It cost me $150,000, big money in those days, but Walter Johnson was our new manager and I wanted to do something nice for him."

Myer teamed with new Manager Joe Cronin as the Nats second-base-shortstop combination that helped take 'em to the pennant in 1933. "What a year that was," he recalled yesterday. "I wasn't the best player in the league but I was the tiredest. Cronin had me batting second, in front of Heinie Manush and himself, and all they did was give me the hit-and-run sign. They had my tongue hanging out."

To beat out Joe Vosmik for the league batting championship in 1935, Myer needed four hits on the final day of the season at Shibe Park. "Leaving for the train that morning," he remembered, "I picked up a safety pin in the lobby and Mrs. Myer asked me what the idea was. I told her that I wasn't superstitious, but that a safety pin always meant a two-base hit."

He proved it to his complete satisfaction, too. He got the four hits he needed to beat out Vosmik, the last of which was a two-bagger, of course.

Navy Rumored Trying to Drop Ohio State U.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 15 (AP).—The Ohio State Journal tonight said Capt. Howard Caldwell, United States Naval Academy athletic director, is in Columbus conferring with officials of Ohio State University.

Ohio State is booked to meet Navy in football games in 1952 and 1953.

There was no official announcement immediately as to what prompted the reported conference. However, the Ohio State Journal said there had been reports in Columbus that the Navy may propose a cancellation of the games.

Richard Larkins, OSU athletic director, said he had "no comment at this time" when asked if the Navy director was seeking cancellation of the games.

There was only one explanation—and that one unofficial—as to why, should reports prove true, Navy would want to cancel the games.

That explanation revolved around reports from the East that the Midshipmen were eyeing a lighter schedule in the future.

The games with Ohio State were reported verbally agreed to by Caldwell's predecessor at the Academy, Capt. Tom Hamilton. However, as far as the Ohio State Journal could determine immediately, written contracts for the games have not yet been signed.

Ohio State has included the Navy games in its announced schedules for the two games, the first in Ohio Stadium, October 18, 1952, and the next at Baltimore, October 17, 1953.

Ohio State Rated 6½-Point Favorite Over Illinois

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP).—Oddsmakers have established Ohio State, the Nation's top-ranking football team, a 6½-point favorite to whip Illinois Saturday and clinch it's second straight Western Conference championship.

Oklahoma, rated No. 2 in this week's Associated Press poll, is considered 20 points better than Missouri. Third-ranked Army, which travels 3000 miles to Palo Alto to meet Stanford, is a 19-point choice to trim the Indians.

Here's how the rest of the top 10 stack up:

4. California 20½ over San Francisco.
5. Kentucky vs. North Dakota (no odds quoted).
6. Texas 13½ over Texas Christian.
7. Princeton 14 over Yale.
8. Illinois.
9. Tennessee 14 over Mississippi.
10. Michigan State 20 over Pittsburgh.

"The gate of a big fight takes a 60 percent cut from television."

Football Contest Selection

It's North vs. South Between Carolinas

WHAT WILL the governor of North Carolina say to the governor of South Carolina? It all depends on how Saturday's football game between North Carolina and South Carolina comes out Saturday at Columbia, S. C. It's one of the top games in this week's Washington Post Pick the Winner Contest.

South Carolina has won four, tied one and lost two. North Carolina, against tougher opponents, has won only two, tied two and lost three. South Carolina lost to little The Citadel in a 19-7 upset last week while North Carolina was holding Maryland to a 7-7 deadlock.

Steve Wadiak, one of the South's better ball carriers will be leading the Gamecocks. Dick Bunting, Bud Wallace and Billy Hayes, an Arlington, Va., lad, will spearhead the Tar Heels.

The contest winner will receive two tickets to the Duke-North Carolina game at Chapel Hill, N. C., November 25, as well as first-class, round-trip transportation for two persons.

Indians Must Beat Western For Group Tie

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Anacostia and Western clash at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the most important game, so far, of the Interhigh Football League season.

Anacostia, in the thick of the championship fight, must win in order to tie idle Eastern for the Group I title. Eastern can back in if Western upsets Anacostia today.

The Group I champ meets McKinley Tech a week from tomorrow night, November 24, at Griffith Stadium in the Interhigh championship game, sponsored by The Washington Post, Touchdown Club and Board of Education.

INTERHIGH GROUP I STANDINGS

	W.	L.	T.	To play
Eastern	5	0	1	0
Anacostia	4	0	1	1
Western	3	1	0	1
Wilson	1	3	1	1
Chamberlain	0	5	0	1

May Play 3 in 8 Days

If Anacostia wins today, it goes headlong into one of the most rugged schedules ever thrust upon any football team.

If unbeaten Anacostia wins today, it plays Eastern either Monday or Tuesday for the Group I crown. The winner of that one plays Tech Friday. In other words, Anacostia must win three games in eight days to cop the Interhigh championship.

Unfortunate for Anacostia, it is inadequately equipped for the big push. Bobby Chatlin, its star 160-pound tailback, broke a small bone in his throwing hand. He'll sit out today's game, and although he may be back next week, his ball carrying and passing naturally will be greatly impaired by the injury.

Today, Anacostia Coach Zuzu

Celtics Beat Caps for 5th in Row

Special to The Washington Post

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 15.—The Boston Celtics tonight rolled up their fifth consecutive National Basketball Association victory, the longest winning streak in their history, as they defeated the Washington Capitols, 79-74, before 2402 at the Rhode Island Auditorium.

NBA Scores

Boston 79 ..... Washington 74
Baltimore 80 ..... Philadelphia 72
Minneapolis 72 ..... Syracuse 71 (overtime)

A sensational closing surge led by Chuck Cooper brought the Celtics their victory after the Boston team came from behind in the second period.

The Caps led 25 to 18 at the end of the first session but the Celtics rallied and trailed by only two points, 43-41, at the end of the half.

The teams were deadlocked 60-60 at the end of the third period. Brady Walker entered the game for the Celtics and contributed three valuable points as the Boston outfit took over a lead in the first two minutes. But the Caps, led by Ace Maugham and Bill Sharman, hung on stubbornly. With only two minutes to go, the score was tied again at 74-74.

Cooper and Bob Cousy aided the Celtics pull back to the tie after the Caps had forged ahead. Cooper also sent the Boston team ahead with two late baskets. Bob Donham and Sonny Hertzberg helped build up the Boston total in the closing 30 seconds.

For Redskins

Browns Won't Let Mont Play

Whatever quarterbacking Tommy Mont does for the Redskins in Cleveland Sunday, will have to be done over a phone in the press box.

Coach Paul Brown of the Browns yesterday voted against a request by the Redskins to take Mont off the coaching staff and make him eligible to play again.

"There's nothing personal involved," Brown explained. "I simply voted against Mont for the best interest of my team. I have a responsibility to my players."

Coach Herman Ball, who's experienced hard luck so often this season that it's nothing new to him, wasn't even put out over his failure in the Mont case.

"That's that," he mused, "and we'll have to do the best we can. Harry Gilmer will play as long as he can and after that we'll have to use Nick Sebek, I guess. Sammy Baugh's back bothers him and he's a very doubtful participant."

President George Marshall, who has been known to take cracks at Cleveland and other teams in the old All-America Conference, had no comment on yesterday's issue.

What with his Redskins having already lost seven in a row and heavy underdogs against the Browns, Marshall apparently wasn't willing to give the Browns any grounds for belaboring his team any more than they are already expected to.

Boost Comes As He Preps Squad for Princeton

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 15 (AP).—Yale today gave head football coach Herman Hickman an unprecedented 10-year appointment.

In doing so, it did what it had twice done before for Hickman. It voluntarily tore up an old agreement. The salary terms were not disclosed.

When Hickman came to Yale in 1948 as successor to Howie Odell, now at the University of Washington, it was on a three-year basis. But Yale liked Hickman so much after that first season that it made it five. And today the five-year pact, which still had three years to run, was supplanted by one which will keep Hickman on the job until December 31, 1960.

Was everybody happy?

"We are very happy," smiled Robert A. Hall, chairman of the university's board of athletic control.

HERMAN HICKMAN

our conviction that football has an important role in our educational program for the training of young Americans.

"We have great confidence and faith in Herman, not only as coach, but as a man of high character and purpose. We believe he is the best qualified coach in the Nation to handle Yale football."

Equally happy was Hickman, whose boys still face what is probably the season's biggest test next Saturday—the Princeton game. "Everyone at Yale has been wonderful," he said, "the players, student body, faculty and alumni. Being coach at Yale is an honor I cherish greatly. I am exceptionally grateful for the trust placed in me."

Elis Bounce Back

Yale football under Hickman has forged steadily although unsensationally ahead. Since taking over from Odell, his varsity has won 13 games, lost 11. In '48 the Bulldogs whiped such major opponents as Brown and Wisconsin while losing to Columbia, Vanderbilt, Dartmouth, Princeton and Harvard.

To date this year the team surprised everyone by starting off with four successive victories over Connecticut, Brown, Fordham and Columbia, lost to Cornell, then bounced back to defeat Holy Cross only to lose to Dartmouth.

The 39-year old Hickman, a native of Johnson City, Tenn., got his start in the game at the University of Tennessee, where he was varsity guard for three years prior to graduation in 1932. Subsequently he played with the Brooklyn Dodgers and, for the three years he was with them, he was chosen all-league guard.

In 1935 he started his coaching career at Wake Forest College. Two years later he became line coach at North Carolina State and, in 1942, was given leave of absence to serve as coach on the Army All-star team which he trained at Yale. From 1943 to 1947 he was West Point line coach, helping to mold some of the cadets' greatest teams.

Tech's P-TA Aims at Wilson's Record of 2500 Ticket Sales

MCKINLEY TECH'S Parent-Teacher Association met last night, and announced flatly that it is out to top the record sale of 2500 Interhigh Football Champion Game tickets, set last year by Wilson's Home School Association.

Mrs. Andrew Weaver, P-TA president, said every Tech parent will be contacted twice, by P-TA and by representatives of Tech's Student Government. P-TA will send ticket-reminder postcards to each parent. Student Government representatives will phone each parent, and will distribute 75 game posters to stores in the northeast section.

The championship game is sponsored by The Washington Post, Touchdown Club, and Board of Education.

TOMMY WHALEN, former Catholic University backfielder, has his shoulder to the wheel to push championship game tickets.

In fact, he's aiming to fill the ballpark by himself. He has already bought tickets for himself, daughter Pat, 14, and son Tony, 9.

"I've also bought an extra batch for any friends who happen to drop in on the family the week of the game," said Tommy. He's selling a lot of ducats at his Brookland Restaurant, 3903 12th st., ne. His partner, former Georgetown basketball star, Ben Zola, is the Touchdown Club's Game Committee representative.

TECH'S Alumni Cicle T Club is in the ticket-selling business for the championship game. The T-Club bought 500 tickets for the convenience of its members and their families and friends.

T-Club members can buy them at Mitchell's Sports Store, 2806 14th st., nw., until Wednesday.

Eddie Barton, T-Club secretary and Landon school basketball and track coach, is in charge of those tickets. He says he'll take care of any T-Club ticket money orders addressed to him at his home, 6201 8th st., nw. T-Club tickets are priced at $1.50 and they're right behind the Tech bench.

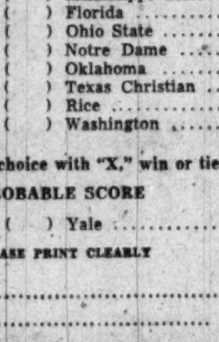
Irish on New Winning Streak

Football Top Topic Again at Notre Dame; Feerick Called Turn on Bones' Comeback

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

WITH NOTRE DAME off on another winning streak, press releases from the Irish sports publicity department once again contain news of its football team. Three weeks ago, when the South Benders were in the throes of a losing streak, tub-thumper Charlie Callahan skipped football completely in his weekly news letter, concentrating on basketball . . . the decision of Coach Bones McKinney to don a Caps' uniform again bears out a prediction made by Bob Feerick when he heard Bones had retired. "He can't afford to because he's his own best player," said Feerick, coach of the 1949-50 Caps . . . The appointment of Al Lopez as manager of the Cleveland Indians increased the circulation of Cleveland newspapers in Washington. Gabe Menendez, lifetime friend of Lopez and his next-door neighbor in Tampa, has subscribed to all three Cleveland papers to keep up with his old pal . . . Two Washington boys, Tackle Carter Bledsoe, of Landon, and End Bill Boteler of Wilson, are currently starring for Haverford College . . .



McKinney

JIM MAGNER and Ted Lewis, of the Conn. ave. restaurant set, threw their annual whinging for sports writers and radio people yesterday. Everything was on the house, including a Magner prediction that his alma mater, North Carolina, would beat Duke again this season . . . The Maryland football team still has one distinction: The Terps claim their 29-year-old Lefty Nairn is the oldest manager in collegiate football . . . George Washington and Georgetown sports people are hosting a luncheon for press-radio folks at the University Club today at 12:15 . . . Max Zaslofsky, all-league player for two years, and Coach Joe Papchick, of the New York Knicks, are not hitting it off too well and indications are Zaslofsky will soon be peddled—to Red Auerbach's surprising Boston Celtics . . . Halfback Bob Shemonski, of Maryland, has gained 1200 yards for the Terps this season running, passing, catching passes and returning punts . . . The National Basketball Association has come up with a new statistical wrinkle—rebound leaders. The pro courtmen are now given credit for everything except inhaling in small arenas . . .

WALTER KENNEDY has resigned as public relations director of the National Basketball Association to accept a similar position with a restaurant chain which features 10-cent hamburgers . . . Tailback Dick Bunting, Charlie Justice's successor at North Carolina, isn't the football player Choo-Choo is but Justice wasn't the student that Bunting is. Bunting has just been elected to Phi Beta Kappa . . . Down at Hopewell, Va., football fans are saying 81-year-old T-formation quarterback Johnny Dean of Hopewell High, is already good enough to make any topflight college team in the country . . . Maryland's 16-13 upset by N. C. State several weeks ago not only cost the Terps a considerable amount of prestige but an even larger amount of money. Had they beaten State, the Terps today would be a shoo-in for one of the major bowl assignments and a take home pay of anywhere from $75,000 to $100,000 . . . Longshot football parlay for the next two weekends: Florida over Miami this Saturday and Tennessee over unbeaten Kentucky the following week . . .

If They Lose 2

Hoyas Could Have Their Worst Mark

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown yet may become a football team of distinction.

It it loses its last two games, it will wind up with the unenviable reputation of compiling the worst won-lost record in the school's history, 1-8.

It takes no great stretch of the imagination to visualize Holy Cross bumping the Hoyas at Worcester Saturday and George Washington applying the crusher here the following week.

Football began on the Hilltop in 1887, nearly 100 years after the school was founded. Once since then has a Georgetown team posted only one victory for the season.

That was in 1932 when Jack Hagerty was in his second year as head coach. His charges beat Mount St. Mary's in their opener, 18-0, tied Manhattan, 20-20, and lost to Canisius, 6-0, Western Maryland, 20-0; William and Mary, 12-6; Boston College, 39-0; Carnegie Tech, 19-0, and West Virginian, 14-12.

The 1933 team of Hagerty's didn't have a single scholarship boy on the squad. Those were the days Hagerty, Line Catch Mush Dubosky and End Coach George Murftagh used to suit up and scrimmage with the boys so that they could field two teams.

The 1905 team perhaps was worse. After sweeping those traditional local rivals, Gallaudet, 10-0, and GW, 12-8, its loss record read like this: Princeton, 34-0; Washington and Jefferson, 27-0; Bucknell, 18-0; Swarthmore, 28-0; North Carolina, 36-0.

That season, the Hoyas really gave football back to the Indians. Carlisle won, 76-0.

Youthful Coach Bob Margarita is having those second-year blues. Georgetown has beaten only Boston College, 20-10, and Denny Myers' boys, haven't beaten anybody, Since tying strong Wake Forest in the first game, 7-7, B. C. has taken seven shellackings.

Georgetown now has six losses at the hands of Penn State, Tulsa, Maryland, Villanova, Miami and Fordham.

Texas' McFadin Lineman of Week

Austin, Tex., Nov. 15 (AP).—Lewis (Bud) McFadin of Texas is this week's Associated Press lineman of the week. The 236-pound, 6-foot 3-inch senior guard helped Texas to a 27-20 triumph over Baylor Saturday with his outstanding performance on offense as well as defense.

McFadin said, "I was sure scared 'til Bobby Dillon made that long run Saturday. Tackle Bob Miller of Virginia was the only player from Washington, D. C., area to receive mention.

Cubs Call Up Root to Coach

Chicago, Nov. 15 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs announced today that Charlie Root, manager of their Des Moines farm team, will coach for the parent club next year.

Root pitched for the Cubs from 1926 to 1941.

Joe Culmone Wins 3 More, Loses Three

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

PIMLICO, Nov. 15 — Things were popping in Maryland racing today. In the order of their importance they were:

1. An alleged doping case was disclosed involving the horse Bob's Birthday, owned by H. L. Compton of Bethesda, Md.

2. Bowie rescinded the cheap horse ban and announced that all horses, regardless of past performances will be eligible.

3. Joe Culmone rode three winners but was beaten three times by young Auggie Catalano, despite some frantic riding.

Trainer John S. Latimer, of Broome's Island, Md., was suspended, along with Bob's Birthday and all other thoroughbreds in his charge. This action was automatic after the stewards announced a uranalysis of the horse showed positive evidence a drug of the nature of amphetamine.

The test was made after Bob's Birthday won the eighth race on last Monday's program, going to the front early and staying there. The veteran finished six lengths ahead of the closest opposition. Backers took down an $18.20 win mutuel.

A representative of the racing commission said an early date would be set for Trainer Latimer's hearing.

Bowie's decision to toss out the ban on horses which have run for less than $1500 and have not won since, came after a meeting of the track's management with officials of the Horsemen's Protective and Benevolent Association.

Although some horsemen were in favor of the ban, it was brought out that many owners and trainers of horses, which ran at the September Bowie meeting had stayed there for the second meeting.

Manfuso said that instead of Laurel and Pimlico having the ban and Bowie without it next year, a uniform rule for all the State's tracks would be worked out.

The abolition of the receiving barn, sought by the horsemen since it was inaugurated under former Commissioner George P. Mahoney, was not taken up at the meeting.

Culmone, in the thick of the battle with Willie Shoemaker for the 1950 jockey title, sent his season's total of winners to 324, being only two behind Shoemaker as the latter went into action at Hollywod Park, Calif.

Culmone's three winners gave him 23 for the Pimlico meeting, but young Catalano piloted three to make it 16. Closest to Catalano in each of his victories, was Culmone.

In the most thrilling finish of the day, a three-way photo, Catalano nipped Culmone in the last jump getting up to win with F. A. Piarulli's Miss Triumph, paying $10. Catalano also won the third with Joe Tucci's Jungle Gypsy at $3.40 and the sixth with Cross Bell Ranch's American Glory at $6.80.

Culmone started the day with a personal daily double paying $11 on the 3-11 combination. He took the first with R. L. Hall, jr.'s Rare Knave at $4.60 and the second with Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Slip O'Ned at $4.80. His third success was with Bobanet Stable's Attention Mark paying $3.60.

SNAP-HAPPY MARINE—When the powerful Quantico Marines line up against Tampa University at Alexandria Saturday, Tom Parsons will be at his usual center post snapping the ball back to Quarterback Eddie LeBaron. Parsons, a Texan, weighs 195 pounds

Ed Fullerton Back in Form

Ed Fullerton, who just last week was believed shelved for the season with a bad knee, looked better yesterday than he has all year as he ground out long gains during a University of Maryland scrimmage.

"In all my years of football, I have never seen anything like it," Coach Jim Tatum remarked as the big sophomore fullback from Pittsburgh bulled his way through the line and threw vicious blocks. "Just last week, we had counted him out. Now, there is no sign of a bad knee. It beats me."

Quarterback Jack Scarbath, out for the last two games with a shoulder injury, also took part in the scrimmage.

Yesterday's was the last contact session before Maryland's Southern Conference tilt with West Virginia at Morgantown Saturday.

The squad will fly to Morgantown in two DC-3's Friday morning.

England Wins, 4-2

SUNDERLAND, England, Nov. 15 (AP)—England's international soccer team defeated Wales, 4-2, today.

Trevor Ford, recently sold for 30,000 pounds ($84,000), scored both Welsh goals.

Coach Wilkinson Cool to Hunters' Hand Warmers

NORMAN, Okla., Nov. 15 (AP). Oklahoma football coach Bud Wilkinson probably doesn't think much of gadgets designed to make things comfortable for outdoor sportsmen.

He bought a batch of chemically treated hand-warmers used by duck hunters and passed them out to his football players for the game against Kansas in Lawrence last Saturday.

The devices kept the Sooners' hands warm but it didn't prevent them from fumbling nine times—seven recovered by Kansas.

Kansas played without handwarmers and handled the ball perfectly.

Majors Draft Begins Today

CINCINNATI, Nov. 15 (AP).—Baseball's annual draft, which pops up tomorrow, poses some pretty problems and quaint questions for big league bigwigs.

On the "grab bag" list are 5668 eligibles, including 238 bonus babies, who may be boosted to big league status through the payment of stipends ranging from $2000 for Class D performers to $10,000 for those in the Triple-A loops.

But this draft doesn't shape up like previous ones, due to a set of intangibles peculiar to the present. The intangibles include:

1. A district probability that all restrictions on bonus players will be lifted at the major-minor meetings in St. Petersburg next month.

2. A probability that some of the present Triple-A circuits might be eliminated from next year's draft, or that the AAA draft price might be boosted from $10,000 to $25,000, with players being permitted to say whether they want to be drafted or not.

3. The effect the military draft might have on big league rosters before the 1951 season.

4. Just what Branch Rickey, new boss of the Pittsburgh Pirates who get first choice in the talent hunt, will do.

The latter question is one which has the boys talking. Rickey must do something to bolster the last-place Pirates and having been in charge of the Brooklyn system for the last few years he has a complete knowledge of the talent hidden away in Dodger farmlands.

The almost certain lifting of the restrictions on bonus players, allowing them to be farmed out more than one year, probably will result in more of the "beauties" being drafted.

Last season the majors drafted 21 players at a cost of $192,500.

In addition to the draft tomorrow's agenda calls for a meeting of major league owners called by Commissioner A. B. Chandler to decide what's to be done with $975,000 received for 1950 World Series television and radio rights.

Legion Hopes To Pick Teams

Official of the American Legion-sponsored Presidential Cup football game December 9 today hope to be able to name the teams they have matched at Byrd Stadium.

Oklahoma and Kentucky, who are heavy favorites to be playing in the Cotton and Sugar Bowls, respectively, were named as the top choices by a panel of 32 sports writers and broadcasters here yesterday.

Others named in the final balloting were, in the order of their performance:

Tennessee, Texas, Southern Methodist, Clemson, Wyoming, Miami, Loyola of California, Texas A. M., Nebraska, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Tulane, Virginia, Washington and Lee, Vanderbilt, Ohio State, Alabama and Wisconsin.

Texas, which must play in the Cotton Bowl if it wins the Southwest Conference title, has another reason for not being able to play in the Legion game. It has a December 9 game already—against L. S. U.

S. M. U. has already said it wouldn't play and Ohio State and Wisconsin can't accept because of a Big Ten rule against all post season games except the Rose Bowl.

Bosox Pitcher McDermott Deferred

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 15 (AP)—Maurice McDermott, star Boston Red Sox southpaw pitcher, has been deferred a month pending a new physical examination, Poughkeepsie selective service board Number 20 announced today, because of McDermott's recurring ear trouble.

Rickey Still Keeps Meyer Unsettled

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 15 (AP).—A pleased but cautious Billy Meyer headed for his Tennessee home tonight still skipper of the dry-docked diamond craft of the Pittsburgt Pirates.

His boss—newly named executive Vice President Branch Rickey—signalled Meyer's retention at least for the time being by failing to announce he was fired.

Billy himself said:

"I'm still in the driver's seat.

"I really don't know for how long. Your guess is as good as mine. But Mr. Rickey hasn't even told me what his final decision is going to be—and he apparently wants me around a while longer."

Rickey, meanwhile, was in a whirlwind of preparation for a big overhaul job on the leaky Pirate craft.

The Mahatma, his son Branch, jr., General Manager Roy Hamey and a few other Buc officials packed up their sheaf of player data and headed for the minor league draft meeting in Cincinnati.

Meyer—summoned by Rickey on Monday for talks that were to determine if Billy would stay as manager—spent most of his time helping Pittsburgh officials and scouts make plans for the Cincinnati confab.

The front office boss and his leftover field manager had one lengthy conference the first day. Afterwards, Rickey said he would make his decision today.

But no announcement was forthcoming.

Shotton Will Be Back With Bums In '51, Paper Says

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP).—The Daily News says "Burt Shotton will be back to manage" the Brooklyn Dodgers next season.

The newspaper declared that Walter O'Malley, who succeeded Branch Rickey as president of the club, "has just about made up his mind about that—and only an overwhelming public protest between now and the end of the month can alter the decision of the Dodger prexy."

O'Malley revealed his position just before boarding a train for Cincinnati for the annual major league draft meetings, the newspaper added.

Williams Goes Fishing

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP).—Boston Red Sox slugger Ted Williams left by plane today for Miami. Williams says he plans to go to the Florida Keys tomorrow for a few days of fishing.

Boudreau 'Interested' in Offer

CINCINNATI, Nov. 15 (AP)—Frank Lane, general manager of the Chicago White Sox, said Lou Boudreau, deposed manager of the Cleveland Indians, "expressed interest" today over an offer to join his club as a player.

Lane said he explained to Boudreau by telephone from here that he naturally would yield if any club offered a managerial position.

Lane said he did not talk salary with Boudreau. That would be out later if the former Clevelander decided to join the Sox, he told a reporter.

It was understood generally that Boudreau was paid around $60,000 at Cleveland last season as a playing pilot.

Under baseball rules, he could not be cut more than 25 percent of that amount if any club claims him on waivers. If he is not claimed, however, and gets an unconditional release he can sign for whatever amount may be offered and is acceptable to him.

Lane said the Sox had not filed a waiver claim and that it would file none at least for a time "to let Lou make up his mind."

At his Harvey, Ill., home, Boudreau confirmed that he had talked with Lane. "But that's as far as I can go," Boudreau explained.

"Go on... BLOW!"

Bill Bennings

DEAR FOLKS: At Pimlico Joe Culmone, trying to win the 1950 jockey title, is beginning to believe Auggie Catalano is his jinx. The Arlington county kid has stood between Culmone and the riding lead held by Willie Shoemaker. By the way, the West Coast seems as much interested in the Culmone-Shoemaker race as the East Coast. In California, the writers are bringing out the fact that rules there work against Shoemaker. A jockey must name his mounts overnight and cannot take more than one optional horse. If both horses are scratched, he is left without a ride in the particular race. Then again the West Coast scribes bring out that Monday for the most part is an off-day in the state. I can't go for this angle, however, because Shoemaker moves down to Agua Caliente on Sundays and gets a crack at 10 or more races. See you on the rail. BILL.

Marshall, Pratt Rematched at Turner's Monday

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez announced last night that he has signed local middleweights Eddie Marshall and Johnny Pratt for an eight round return bout on the weekly boxing show at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

Marshall Clayton, former all-Army lightweight champion and Luis Ramos, hard-punching Peurto Rican scrapper, will hammer it out in the 10-round feature.

Marshall and Pratt, local belters, two weeks ago fought a knock-down-drag-out draw before 2283 spectators.

Bernie Moore Envisions Frosh On Varsity in '51

ATLANTA, Nov. 15 (AP)—Freshmen football players in 1951 probably will be allowed on college varsity squads.

That's the opinion expressed by Bernie Moore, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, to Ed Danforth, sports editor of the Atlanta Journal.

In his column, "Ear to the Ground," Danforth quoted Moore as saying, "I would not be surprised to see them (freshmen) given varsity status all over the country next fall. Anybody who reads the news from the Far East can see we are in for a long spell of preparedness if not warfare.

"I look for many a college boy to be drafted early next year."

Lacks Adult Fans

County High Loop on Rocks

The Prince Georges County High School Football League, just a little over one year old, is in danger of folding because of financial difficulties.

Bladensburg High Coach Merle Duvall said last night that, when the league last year started it cost $20,000 to inaugurate the program. Duvall said only $10,000 was realized from 1949 games, thus putting the league $10,000 in the red at th estart of he 1950 season.

This year, crowds have been poor, and Duvall puts the onus on the adults for their failure to attend the games. He said, "The kids seem to attend fairly well, but we have trouble getting the older folks out to the games.

Most League games are played at night at the University of Maryland's old Byrd Stadium, donated by the university. Largest crowd at any of the six-team League games was the 3800 who saw the Bladensburg-St. John's contest. Crowds for the other games have been under par, however.

Duvall made a plea to the adults to "please come out and help us with our football program."

Snyder Asks 75 Pct. Excess Profits Tax

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

GLORIA BARATTINI, of Baltimore, has abandoned plans for a career in grand opera and (figure this one out) is going to invade the professional wrasslin' game, not that she needs the body-building exercise particularly. The statistics show she's 20 and weighs 145 for her 5 feet 7 inches.

Last-Minute Motorists Jam Inspection Places

With last midnight the deadline for Virginia automobile inspection, State Police said about seven-eighths of the estimated 60,000 vehicles in the nearby Virginia area had been approved.

The figure on approved vehicles came from Trooper R. H. Lester of the Groveton Bar racks, who yesterday made a spot check of many of the 100 inspection points in Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William counties and the cities of Alexandria and Falls Church.

Lester, who supervises the inspection program in the area, said he found long lines of waiting motorists at nearly every point on his tour.

Most garages handling the check said they expected to have rush inspection business the rest of the week from tardy motorists who missed last nights deadline.

2 Fined and Jailed In Auto Sticker Cases

Judge James R. Duncan of Alexandria Civil and Police Court yesterday imposed fines and jail sentences on two Alexandrians found guilty of illegal possession of automobile inspection stickers.

Curtis Lee Maxwell, 35, 822 Duke st., Alexandria, was fined $100 and given 10 days in jail after he admitted taking four stickers from the Hunter Motor Co., where he is employed. Alfred Melton, 25, 1205 Cameron st., pleaded innocent of illegal use and possession of a sticker on his car, but received penalties of $50 and 10 days in jail.

World War II profits. The 95 percent World War II rate was later reduced to 85½ percent on profits in excess of 1936-39 average earnings. Before it was repealed in 1945 it yielded 16 billion dollars in revenue.

Snyder recommended that corporations be given the choice of using either the new "base period earnings credit" or an "invested capital credit" as in World War II.

Allowances "Too Low"

Invested capital allowances in World War II were 8 percent on the first five million dollars of invested capital, six percent on the next five million dollars and five percent on the amount over 10 million dollars. Snyder termed these allowances too "low" for present business conditions and urged they be increased by "about one-fourth to one-third."

In computing the tax, he also asked that allowances be made for borrowed capital, impaired capital and new capital. In lieu of the $10,000 specific exemption from the tax provided in World War II, he recommended a "minimum credit" of $25,000 for all corporations.

Snyder conceded that the excess profits tax, aimed partly at war profiteering, would increase taxes in some instances on corporations whose profits had dropped.

He stressed that he preferred not to call it an "excess profits tax" but rather a "profits tax" or a "defense profits tax."

Mr. Truman, he emphasized, had three objectives in mind in seeking the levy, and not war profits alone. He said these objectives were:

"First, to contribute to meeting the increased cost of defense: second, to help check inflationary pressures and enable the Government to maintain a strong financial position; and third, to tax the high profits resulting from the defense program."

He said the Treasury staff had weighed many alternative plans before choosing the profits levy as best suited to wartime conditions. To raise four billion dollars by a flat increase in present taxes would mean a boost from the present 45 percent top rate to 57 percent, he said. He said that would hit corporations whose profits are declining.

Snyder said the plan to tax corporate profits retroactively to July was "the President's recommendation." He would not say under questioning whether he held a different view.

Cites Record Profits

The Secretary cited figures, industry by industry, to show that corporate profits are now running at record highs. If the proposed four billion dollar tax is properly distributed he said they would still have "high earnings and a high rate of return on investment."

Terming the volume of defense spending still uncertain, he said a "conservative estimate" indicates a $2 billion deficit for this fiscal year. He said the total budget for the current year will run around $45 billion as against a tax yield of $43 billion. Since spending lags behind actual commitments, he said the committee should not be "misled" by the present comparatively moderate deficit. He said it was "sobering" to think of the ultimate impact of necessary taxes.

He frankly hinted at more taxes to come on individuals, terming the proposed profits levy the "second installment" on the President's recent "interim" tax program.

2 Hurt in Phone Strike Violence Here

The Washington Post

Pickets continue marching in front of entrance where two men were hurt in scuffle yesterday

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Two men were hurt yesterday in an exchange of fisticuffs marking the first District picket-line violence of the telephone strike.

A company truck attempted to back into the Western Electric cable yard at Kendall and Okie sts. ne., yesterday morning but was stopped by the pickets. A nonstriker on the truck and a picket exchanged words and blows and the picket was hurt.

Two hours later the truck came back to pick up rolls of cables from the yard, operated by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. subsidiary against which the strike is directed. The truck belonged to the Cheaspeake and Potomac Telephone Co.

Melee Follows Recognition

This time the pickets recognized the non-striker line foreman, and a general melee followed. A policeman on hand broke it up and more police arrived soon afterward. Police Pvt. Thomas J. Kelly got hit twice in breaking up the fight.

Injured were John B. Holman, 21, of 1147 45th pl, se. a ware houseman who was on the picket line, and Guy Staats, 57, of Vienna, Va., the foreman. Holman was treated at Sibley Hospital and Staats at Casualty Hospital both for cuts and bruises.

Two pickets were taken to Number 9 police station, questioned and then released. They were listed as Robert P. Norton, 21, of 4412 Texas ave. nw., and Frank C. Bowler, 29, of 1515 Jefferson st., Hyattsville, Md. Norton is a repairman and Bowler a phone installer.

After the second scrap, the Western Electric depot was closed for the day and the truck left without picking up the cable, destined for a Virginia job.

J. R. B. Crigler, vice president and general manager of the Phone Co. here, later issued a statement calling the incident "regrettable." He said "it could have been avoided had the Western Electric Co. pickets not been abusive to our employes who were attempting to carry out their assigned work." He said the company intends "to do all we can" to prevent recurrences while keeping phone service uninterrupted. He concluded:

"For the duration of the Western Electric strike we hope pickets will conduct themselves in the same orderly manner they have exhibited in Washington prior to today's outbreak."

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Klutts

Here are additional points in the Civil Service Commission's so-called indefinite program which Federal employes should know about:

PROMOTIONS: The tens of thousands of employes who will be given indefinite appointments will be made eligible for grade promotions under the restrictions revealed here yesterday. The indefinites also will be allowed to transfer to other jobs both inside and outside their agencies. Both changes will become effective December 1.

The new policy will end job "freezes" for many thousands of temporary employes, and it marks an about-face for the Civil Service Commission. For example, you'll recall that about six weeks ago the commission directed Federal agencies to make emergency-indefinite appointments to fill jobs of Government employes who enter the military service. These appointees were to be "frozen" in the jobs they were appointed to, and they weren't to be either grade-promoted or transferred. After December 1, these transfer and promotions restrictions will be wiped out.

RECONVERSION: An estimated 250,000 Federal workers will have their appointments converted to "indefinite" within the next few weeks. In addition, all persons appointed to temporary jobs will be called indefinites. Also, persons reinstated and given interagency transfers will be given "indefinite" status. In other words, the commission is making a strenuous effort to get away from "emergency," a most-disturbing word to Federal workers.

These are among groups of employes whose appointments will be converted to indefinite: "temporaries" pending establishment of Civil Service registers; temporary substitutes in the Post Office Department; emergency-indefinite appointees, and reappointees.

TRANSFER: The word "transfer" also will go out the window; that is, any transfer from one agency to another. It makes no difference whether a person resigns and is reemployed by another agency or if he's transferred through an interagency agreement, his status will be the same: Indefinite.

However, if a career person is transferred with reemployment rights and who is later fired in a reduction of force will be given the rights of a DCE (displaced career employe) and Civil Service will try to find him a job.

REASSIGNMENTS: This is one for the books: a permanent employe who is given a technical reassignment within his own agency can be made an indefinite. A technical reassignment doesn't involve a grade promotion. An example of it is a Grade 5 employe who is moved to another Grade 5 job in his own agency in a different line of work. The President's order gives the agency head the discretion of giving that person an indefinite status or allowing him to continue his permanent appointment.

If a grade promotion is involved, the person, of course, would be given an indefinite promotion as required under the Whitten rider which became law last September 1. The rider made no mention of reassignments—which was covered in the President's order.

REINSTATEMENTS: Civil Service has abolished all the restrictions on reinstatements of former permanent employes. Hereafter, any person who had permanent status at one time is eligible for reinstatement, provided he can meet minimum job standards. Such persons won't have to take and passed competitive exams, and those given jobs will be indefinite appointees.

Under the old system, a person who had permanent status for a year and who left Government had to be reinstated within a year to retain his status. A two-year employe had to be reinstated within two years; a three-year employe in three years; a four-year employe in four years, but an employe with five or more years of service had permanent reinstatement rights. Now any former permanent employe has equal reinstatement rights since the most he could get would be an indefinite job.

COMMERCE: Clarence Osthagen, a special assistant to Air Force Assistant Secretary Zuckert, is reported to have the inside track to be appointed Administrative Assistant Secretary of the Commerce Department.

Children Sent Away for Care, With Space Here

Speaker Deplores District's Failure To Make Full Use Of Institutions

Many Washington foster care institutions are not filled "anywhere near capacity" and yet children are being sent "as far away as Baltimore and farther for specific institutional care."

That is what Canon Richard Williams, of the social relations department, Episcopal Diocese of Washington, told those attending a United Community Services discussion on foster care resources yesterday.

Canon Williams was one of a panel of speakers who frankly admitted they had unanswered questions about how best to take care of children who must stay away from home either because they are "dependent," neglected or have behavior problems.

"There are children coming from broken homes who are unable to make the adjustment to a foster home," Canon Williams said. "The emotional stress and strain which the child has experienced has caused such a mental, emotional and spiritual disturbance that specialized care is necessary . . . At present it is the exceptional institution that is able to cope with this type of problem.

"If the private institutions cannot take this load does it not follow that whether we like it or not, public welfare will be forced into building and maintaining more and more institutions?"

Canon Williams said it "seems obvious" that "agencies will have to be run on a nonsegregated basis" eventually and long-range plans for this should be made now.

Miss A. Patricia Morss, licensing agent for the Board of Public Welfare, said 52 percent of the 2531 children receiving foster care in Washington are in homes, and 48 percent in institutions.

Public agencies place 74 percent in foster homes, she noted, while private agencies place 79 percent in institutions.

"All too frequently," she said, "dependent children who need group care can get it only in correctional institutions."

Miss Genevieve Gabower, director of the Children's Protective Association, asked whether it should be the function of private agencies to provide special care for the emotionally disturbed child.

Miss Leora G. Fields, of the child welfare division of the Board of Public Welfare, said the board now is making a drive for foster care for very young children. She said requests have been received from St. Elizabeths Hospital for foster care for babies only four hours old.

She said public institutions do not have enough case workers for emotionally disturbed children and their mothers. Often these problems are not received, she said, until the "explosion point has been reached."

About 150 persons attended the discussion, held at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw., by the Family and Child Welfare Section of UCS.

Left Note

Missing Wife Hinted At Suicide

Mrs. Virginia B. Fitch, 35, of 4740 Woodberry rd., Calvert Homes subdivision in Riverdale, Md., was reported missing from her home yesterday by her husband, James Fitch, a printer with a Washington commercial firm.

Fitch told Prince Georges police that his wife was missing when he returned home at about 12:45 p. m. yesterday. He said he found a note in which she hinted at suicide. Mrs. Fitch has been suffering from a nervous disorder, police said.

Mrs. Fitch also gave instructions as to where her twin sons, Dennis and Terry, 2, were, and told her husband that Ronald, 6, was in school. She was last seen, dressed in a green dress, red coat and black shoes, and not wearing a hat, standing at the Melrose Crossing in Hyattsville, Md., waiting for a Washington-bound street car.

A Washington police broadcast described the woman as "emotionally upset."

Two Cleared In Deaths on D. C. Streets

Coroner's Jury Rules Pedestrian Killings Were Accidental

The deaths of two pedestrians in District traffic accidents within the past week were ruled accidental yesterday by a coroner's jury.

One victim was Mrs. Mary Stack, 80, of 4514 New Hampshire ave., who died at 11 a. m. Friday at Emergency Hospital of injuries received October 26 when she was struck by a car in front of her home.

The jury exonerated Joseph N. Romm, 53, proprietor of the Mount Vernon Cycle Shops, 933 G st. nw., and driver of the car.

In the second case, the jury found death was due to "negligence of the deceased," 52-year-old Joseph Doyle, 1325 16th st. nw., a former Washington Monument guard.

Doyle died at 8 a. m. Monday at Emergency Hospital from injuries received Saturday night, when he was struck by a truck at 15th st. and Rhode Island ave. nw.

The driver of the truck, John S. Few, 38, of 1433 T st. nw., employe of the Batt Bates Duplicating Co., 1407 K st. nw., faces a charge of driving at unreasonable speed. He is free on $500 bond pending a hearing December 5, in Municipal Court.

Truck Crashes Into Store When Driver 'Blacks Out'

A 31-year-old truck driver escaped serious injury yesterday when his huge tractor-trailer plunged through the show window of a Riverdale store after he reportedly "blacked out."

The driver, John H. LeGrant, of 1805 5th st. nw., was treated at Leland Memorial Hospital in Riverdale for minor cuts and bruises.

The truck, going north on Baltimore blvd., leaped the curb at Queensbury st. and crashed into the front show window of the Center Market at 6201 Queensbury rd.

Witnesses, police said, said LeGrant was slumped over the wheel when the truck left the highway. He has suffered "black out" attacks several times during the past three months, they said he told them. No charge was preferred against Le Grant.

William King, store owner, would not estimate the damage immediately.

County Separates Trash

As a concession to Arlington County's new incinerator, residents are being asked to keep their ashes, yard sweepings, broken toys, automobile fenders, and other non-inflammable trash in separate containers. County officials said these non-combustibles are now being collected by a separate truck. Bottles and tin cans still go with the regular trash.

In Murder Cases

Bar Group Will Study Arraigning

Myron G. Ehrlich was named yesterday to head a special Bar Association committee which will investigate overlapping means of arraigning persons charged with murder.

At present murder suspects in the District can be, and are, arraigned by the coroner, the United States Commissioner or judges of both Municipal and District Courts. All have power to set bond.

Ehrlich was named to head the committee by Charles E. Ford, chairman of the Bar Association's Committee on Criminal Rules and Procedure.

Ford acted one day after a client of his had been held for action of the grand jury for the second time.

U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence ordered Ford's client, George B. Wilgus, held under $3000 bond for the grand jury Friday and charged with the second-degree murder of his wife.

At an inquest on the death of Wilgus's wife Tuesday, a coroner's jury also ordered him held for the grand jury.

The question of overlapping jurisdiction arose when Coroner Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald attempted to fix bond in the Wilgus case.

Ehrlich said his committee would seek the views of the United States Attorney, the Superintendent of Police, the coroner, the United States Commissioner, and District Court Judge Edward A. Tamm, about what agency should hold preliminary hearings in cases where the manner of death is unknown.

A survey of methods used in other areas will be made, Ehrlich said, and a report will be submitted to the Bar Association.

A practicing lawyer for 23 years, Ehrlich was inspector general of all Naval Courts for two years during World War II.

Davis Delays Filing Bill for New Penalties

Will Present Measure, After Revision, When 82d Congress Meets

The long-awaited law enforcement reform bill for the District probably will not be introduced until the new Congress convenes in January, Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) said last night.

The chairman of the House District Crime Subcommittee explained that the tentative draft of the measure, now in circulation among local court and law enforcement officials "is not final, will be worked over a great deal more and undoubtedly will be toned down in several spots." The draft was prepared by the subcommittee staff.

Davis said he saw no particular advantage in filing the measure in the "lame duck" session, since it was unlikely to receive floor consideration.

The omnibus reform proposal was distributed to more than a dozen law enforcement officials two months ago with a request for study and comment.

Davis proposes to sponsor a bill which has received the unanimous approval of downtown officials.

Stiffer punishment for repeater criminals is the dominant note of the measure, which also would:

1. Abolish inquests by the District Coroner's office.

2. Nearly double penalties for abortion, indecent exposure, prostitution and disorderly conduct, and being found in a gambling house.

3. Curtail the discretionary powers of judges by spelling out the specific penalty on several offenses. For instance, the bill would direct a three-year minimum sentence on all assault cases.

4. Impose life imprisonment for habitual criminals (defined as a person convicted of five or more crimes, either misdemeanors or felonies or both).

There would be no probation allowable in all crimes of violence if the bill became law.

Postlude

Francescatti Violin Solo 'Stops Show'

By Paul Hume
Post Reporter

Once in a while a performance of a piece of music is so good no one in the audience thinks of stopping the applause for minutes.

That's the way it was last night when Zino Francescatti finished playing the B Minor violin concerto by Camille Saint-Saens. Francescatti was soloist with the National Symphony under Howard Mitchell. When he finished the pyrotechnics of the final movement, the clapping was augmented by shouts of 'encore."

It kept up for a long time, while the soloist returned with the conductor time and again, then alone, and then again with the conductor. Francescatti shook hands with the concertmaster, with Mr. Mitchell numerous times, and everyone looked perfectly happy about the whole thing.

Well they might. It was a brilliant reading of a concerto whose essence is suave elegance. If there is any musician playing in public today who epitomizes musical elegance, it is Francescatti.

His tone in tender sustained passages is of purest sheen. For technical display he has no master. The close of the second movement is a bit of wizardry on the part of all. Saint-Saens wrote a series of arpeggios for clarinet and violin, with the violinest playing in harmonics. It was touched with true magic last night, as Mr. Genussa joined the soloist in expounding its beauties.

The concerto stood midway in a program of three works. Virgil Thomson's suite, Louisiana Story, opened the concert. Its virtuoso pages were played with both sensitiveness and big, bold lines. The music fits to perfection the documentary film for which it was written. It is also a handsome piece of program music for any concert.

Dvorak's romantic fourth symphony closed the evening. It makes demands upon the brass, especially upon the horns. These were met with fire and assurance last night. The renovated horn section was thrilling at every point.

The marvels of the slow movement were followed by bounding folk melodies in the third and fourth. The third was a gem, except that the repeated D's in the trumpet must be played much more softly. This symphony ought to remain in the repertoire. It is a singularly attractive bit of mid-European writing as worth hearing as the Brahms and Schumann it recalls.

Lano Demands Arlington Return Seized Slot Machines

The attorney for Sam Lano, former Prince Georges County slot machine operator, yesterday demanded the "immediate return" of five of Lano's pinball machines confiscated in a raid last month by Arlington authorities.

In a letter to Arlington Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker, Attorney Alfred W. Trueax said Rucker had "no legal right" to seize the "free play" pinball machines.

Trueax said that unless his demand is complied with in five days, he would take legal steps to force Rucker to give up the machines—plus $16 in them at the time of the raid.

Rucker told reporters yesterday he will reject Trueax's demand and proceed with court action to have the pinball machines destroyed.

'Little Willie' Adams Acquittal Upheld

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 15 (AP). William (Little Willie) Adams, Baltimore political figure, today won final clearance of gambling charges filed after a vice squad raid on a numbers racket headquarters.

The Court of Appeals turned down the State's bid for a new trial on double jeopardy grounds.

Adams had been acquitted of six charges when Judge Michael J. Manley ruled in Baltimore Criminal Court a search warrant police carried when they arrested Adams was too vague.

The State appealed on a technical point involving the nature of Manley's decision, which dismissed six indictments against Adams and at the same time acquitted him.

Sam Lano Again Asks Verdict Be Reversed

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 15 (AP). Sam Lano today asked the Court of Appeals for the second time to upset his conviction on an extortion charge.

Lano was found guilty under a statute the Maryland Legislature actually intended to repeal more than fifty years ago, Lano's lawyers said. Somehow the provision creeped into a supplement to the code of laws.

This was Lano's second appeal of a Prince Georges County Court decision convicting him of threatening the owner of Duffy's Tavern at 4308 Rhode Island ave., Brentwood.

The state said Lano warned he would file a bad-check charge unless John Duffy kept two slot machines owned by Lano in the tavern.

School Head Says Multitude Of Drives Hampers Education

If officials granted every request to conduct fund drives in Arlington County schools, "we would not have time to teach the three R's," School Superintendent William A. Early said yesterday.

As a result, Early said, financial drives among students "will be limited to those which can be of educational value to the students."

For example, he said, the "Freedom Scroll" drive among students for Freedom Bell in Berlin was assigned to the senior class at Washington-Lee High School since the class was studying the problems involved.

The collection being sponsored by Mrs. John S. Battle, wife of Virginia's governor, to help pay for a fountain at United Nations headquarters, is limited to Arlington's eighth grade pupils studying the U.N.

Schools will use area Community Chest and Tuberculosis Association educational material in the classrooms, but funds for these drives will not be solicited from pupils, Early said.

Wakefield Dairy Drops Outside Milk Imports

Firm Won't Appeal Court Dissolution Of Restraining Order Against District

Wakefield-Model Farms Dairy, leader in a drive to delay imposition of the District's new milk market policy, yesterday announced it no longer will handle "outside" milk.

This statement was made as District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff dissolved an order restraining the city authorities from limiting milk sales within the city to supplies drawn from farms inspected by city health officials.

Wakefield, through its attorney, John F. Hillyard, last week asked Judge Holtzoff for an injunction against the city's milk regulations. The judge denied this, finding the regulations "not obviously unreasonable," but gave the dairy a week in which to consider filing an appeal from his decision.

Decide Against Appeal

The diary decided not to file an appeal, and announced that starting yesterday all its milk will come from farms inspected by the city.

Hillyard hinted one source would be the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, on whom Wakefield has waged verbal war. Other sources will be the Capitol Milk Producers Association of Frederick, Md., and individual farms holding District of Columbia permits, it was reported.

Judge Holtzoff, in dissolving the restraining order yesterday, amplified his decision in denying the injunction. He said:

"It is common knowledge that stringent measures must be taken by every big city to obvitate, or minimize, importation of contaminated milk as a possible source of disease.

Careful and ealous

"The Commissioners have been careful and zealous to protect the health of the public. The objections raised (by Wakefield) are entirely within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners. It is almost unreasonable to have asked the court to substitute its judgment for that of the Commissioners in adopting the milk regulations."

The Wakefield policy leaves only two dairies—Embassy and Highland Farms—operating under a special provision of the District's new milk market order. The order permits dairies to process "outside" grade A milk for sale to nearby Maryland and Virginia customers, but limits sales in the city to District-inspected supplies.

Sachs and Wood

Two Lawyers Join Collazo Defense Setup

Two more lawyers were appointed yesterday to assist in the defense of Oscar Collazo, one of the two Puerto Ricans who tried to assassinate President Truman.

Judge Edward A. Tamm of District Court named former Assistant United States Attorneys Sidney S. Sachs and Kenneth D. Wood to work with Leo A. Rover to handle the defense.

Collazo may be arraigned Friday on an indictment charging him with two counts of first-degree murder and two of assault with intent to kill in the Blair House tragdy.

Judge Tamm refused to divulge why Rover was given co-counsel in the case. Rover was assigned earlier when Collazo informed the court he was unable to get a lawyer.

Rover is a former United States attorney with a wide court experience. Sachs was noted while prosecutor as a researcher and Wood as an investigator.

Citizen Group Indorses Civil Defense Plan

The Dahlgen Terrace Citizens Association last night endorsed the civil defense program and the current diabetes detection drive.

In another resolution members, meeting at the Noyes School, pledged to report Communists if they came in contact with any.

Kingman Park

Mrs. Inez West was elected president of the Kingman Park Civic Association at a meeting Tuesday at the Browne Junior High School.

Her predecessor, John McGriff, was elected vice president. Others elected: Allen M. Douglas, recording secretary; Edgar Cherubim, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Edith Snowden, financial secretary; Mrs. Martha Simpson, treasurer; Julius Fischer, sergeant-at-arms, and William A. Outten, chaplain.

In two resolutions the group asked for increased bus service in the community and for a traffic light at 17th st. and Maryland ave. ne.

Bradbury Heights

Ten new members were admitted to the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association at a meetng last night in the Bradbury Heights Methodist Church.

A committee was appointed to work with the Bradbury Heights Garden Club in a contest to select the best decorated door in the community during the Christmas holidays. A representative of the Fourteenth Precinct Station explained the proposed civilian defense set up to the meeting.

Roosevelt High Group To Stage Musical Revue

Students, their parents and the faculty of Roosevelt High School will present a musical revue at 8:15 p. m. tonight and Friday for the school fund.

The first show of its kind to be staged by the school, it is called the "Roosevelt Rollicking Revue" and will be held in the school auditorium. Tickets are being sold for 75 cents for either performance.

AWOL Customer Swoons During FBI Questioning

A man who waited a day while the Franc Jewelry Store, 3100 14th st. nw., checked his "credit rating" returned to the store late yesterday to get the radio and watch he ordered Tuesday.

Instead, he got a reception committee of FBI and Central Intelligence Department agents and Metropolitan police who thought the Army first lieutenant's identification card he had presented the store manager on Tuesday was phony.

Manager Shepherd L. Salon, also thinking the ID card false, notified police. The unsuccessful credit buyer fainted, police said, when told he was charged with impersonating a Federal officer.

At Gallinger Hospital where he was treated for hysteria, the man was identified as John Albert Lane, 28, of 1451 Fairmont st. nw. Lane told police he is an Army master sergeant, 16 days AWOL from Andrews Air Force Base.

Hine Junior High Plans Fun Carnival

Highlight of the carnival will be the crowning of the Hine King and Queen. Proceeds will go into the Hine student fund. The public is invited.

Girl Friend Gets Dead Man's Compensation, Court Rules

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 15 (AP).—The Court of Appeals today upheld a dependency amendment to Maryland's workman's compensation law and said it could "not adopt a public policy contrary to the plain provisions" of the law.

Judge William L. Henderson, speaking for the majority, declared that a legal or moral obligation is not implied in the word "dependent" and that charitable motives are sufficient to show cause of dependency.

The Housing Authority of Baltimore, whose employe John Daniels was fatally injured on February 18, 1949, while working, had contended Mrs. Ida R. Kendall of Baltimore was not eligible for compensation because she was not married to Daniels. The Baltimore Court of Common Pleas decided the case in favor of the employer because it said to do otherwise would be condoning common law marriage.

Daniel and Mrs. Kendall, both over 50, had lived together since 1939. They did not marry, Mrs. Kendall testified, because it would have been contrary to her religion. She was a Catholic widow and he had been divorced.

For one year prior to Daniels' death, Mrs. Kendall worked as house mother in an orphange. They still saw each other, and Daniels continued to help support her and her two youngest children.

Neither the Housing Authority nor the lower court disavowed Mrs. Kendall's financial dependency upon Daniels.

The Program is directed by J. Edward Gerald, University of Minnesota Professor of Journalism, under guidance of Edgar B. Wesley, University Professor of Education.

Answers will be printed in The Post on Saturday. Some of the test questions may involve degrees of correctness rather than indisputable facts. In such cases select the BEST answer.

Steer Brings $2.50 a Pound

A GOOD STEER—Donald Hobbs, jr., of Sandy Spring, and Herbert King, of Woodfield, Montgomery County members of the 4-H Club, show Jamie, a fat steer entered in the show.

TIMONIUM, Md., Nov. 15 (AP).—Most of the steers, hogs and lambs that were paraded bfore the judges earlier this week at the Eastern National Livestock Show were judged again today — this time by the slaughter house buyers.

The top price paid for any animal at the auction was $2.50 per pound on the hoof. A local meat packer paid that much for the 1160-pound Hereford adjudged the grand champion steer. It was exhibited by the 36-L Ranch of Miami, Okla.

Twelve-year-old Peter Miller of Millbrook, N. Y., got the next highest price—$1 a pound—for his reserve champion steer—an Aberdeen Angus.

The judges awarded the senior and grand champion bull ribbons to Gen. Elbamar Leader, exhibited by Guy A. Leader and sons of York, Pa. The junior and reserve grand champion female Aberdeen Angus was Blackbird III of Shadow Isle, shown by Shadow Isle Farms of Red Bank, N. J. The reserve grand champion was exhibited by the Le Baron Farm Warrenton, Va.

Glenockie Farms of Haywood, Va., and Ankony Farm of Rhinebeck, N. Y., showed the junior champion female and the reserve junior champion, respectively.

MRS. DEAN ACHESON, MME. PANDIT AND WELLESLEY PRESIDENT MARGARET CLAPP
... at the Indian Embassy reception yesterday

Mme. Pandit Entertains

Wellesley Invades Embassy

By Dorothea Cruger

THE INDIAN EMBASSY was the scene of a real college get-together yesterday. The occasion was the reception given by the Ambassador, Mme. Pandit in honor of the new Wellesley president, Miss Margaret Clapp.

More than 300 former Wellesley students met in the dining room and large crystal-chandeliered drawing room to talk over old times and greet Miss Clapp on the occasion of her first visit to Washington since she assumed the college presidency. Later they sat on the drawing room floor "in true Wellesley style" to hear brief speeches by Miss Clapp and Mme. Pandit.

In the receiving line with Mme. Pandit and Miss Clapp were the hostess' daughter, Mme. Gautam Sahgal, a 1947 graduate of the college, and Miss Katherine Sater, president of the Washington alumnae group. Another daughter, Mrs. Ashok Mehta, a 1945 Wellesley graduate, is with her husband in Switzerland.

Mme. Pandit flew to Washington especially for the reception, coming from New York where she is a delegate to the United Nations. In addition to having two daughters who are Wellesley graduates, Mme. Pandit holds an honorary LL. D. degree from the college.

TAKING TURNS pouring at the table, which was spread with Indian delicacies, were many prominent alumnae, including Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the Associate Justice and Mrs. Hiram C. Houghton, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Other alumnae who helped pour were Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Dr. Julia Green, Mrs. Walter Brookings, Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor, Mrs. Dana Parkinson, Mrs. Edwin H. Nourse and Mrs. Hugh Perrin.

In her address Mme. Pandit praised Wellesley as a place where women could get together to learn how to "remove the stumbling blocks to peace and freedom." India, she said, looks with interest to the women of the United States, for Indians realize that there, as here, women must help work out a solution to world problems.

Next President Clapp greeted the alumnae, and told them the aim of Wellesley was not to produce "walking encyclopedias," but rather disciplined minds that know how to learn and how to apply their knowledge.

PRESIDENT CLAPP was inaugurated on March 17 of this year, at the same time that the college bestowed the honorary degree upon Mme. Pandit. A Wellesley graduate, class of 1930, the college president won the 1948 Pulitzer Prize in biography for her book "Forgotten First Citizen: John Bigelow," written as a thesis for her Ph.D. degree from Columbia University in 1946. She also holds degrees from Smith College and Northwestern University.

MISS MARGARET RUTH BEATTIE whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Beattie of Cheverly, Md., announce her engagement to Allan G. Bogue of London, Ontario. Miss Beattie received her bachelor's degree from the University of Maryland, and her master's degree from Cornell University, where she is now candidate for a doctorate. She is instructor in American history at Vassar College.

Mr. Bogue received his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Western Ontario. He is now a candidate for a doctorate at Cornell University. He is at present lecturer in economics and history and assistant librarian at the University of Western Ontario. During the last war he served with the Canadian Armoured Corps as a lieutenant.

The wedding will take place during the Christmas season

THE NEW PRESIDENT OF SMITH COLLEGE, Benjamin Fletcher Wright, and Mrs. Wright (center) have a chat with the president of the Smith Club of Washington, Mrs. Thomas A. Rymer. The picture was taken at a meeting of the Smith alumnae of Washington, held yesterday at the home of Mrs. Theodore Dominick

'Training for Citizenship'

Smith President Addresses Alumnae

"TIME FOR Essentials," a talk given last evening by Benjamin Fletcher Wright, president of Smith College, dealt with problems of modern education. The address was made before alumnae of the college at 8 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce Hall of Flags.

Mr. Wright believes the essentials of modern education lie in training a student to be a good citizen, and that this training can best be brought about in the independent school.

In Europe, he states, colleges and universities are supported by the government, while in this country, the independent college still exists. Just as democracy is less well-defined and more flexible than totalitarianism, so the independent school has more flexible curricula and gives greater room for development of the individual than the government-subsidized school.

THE QUESTION of independent schools versus government-subsidized schools has arisen from present rise in the cost of living. While the cost of operation has increased, income from endowment has diminished, and this problem of cost and income has been met in European schools by government subsidizing.

At a morning meeting held at the home of Mrs. Theodore Dominick, Smith alumnae had an opportunity to meet President Wright and Mrs. Wright, who have been at Smith for just one year. Informal discussions at the meeting brought out ways in which the college and alumnae can support each other. Regional alumnae colleges were suggested on the one hand, and better support of the college's annual fund was suggested on the other hand.

Before coming to Smith, Mr. Wright was professor of government or Harvard. He is considered one of the principal authorities in the country on constitutional law and government.

Hoe-down Resounds Along 16th Street

By Marie McNair

"ALL JUMP UP and never come down, and swing your partner round and round," might have been heard coming out of the stately Carlton Room of the Carlton Hotel last night, as dowagers and dignitaries wheeled and circled through a rousing hoe-down.

WHEN FORMER AMBASSADOR and Mrs. Joseph Davies were at their Adirondacks Camp Topridge last summer, they filled their big house every weekend with Washington friends. Very often an orchestra was flown in from New York and everybody joined in for an evening of square dancing.

Last night Mr. and Mrs. Davies held a Washington reunion at the Carlton Hotel. The 100 guests were asked to come as early as 7 o'clock if they liked but were expected to leave by 11 p. m. There was nothing formal about it, Mrs. Davies leaving it to her friends whether they wanted "to dress" or not.

During the evening there was a buffet supper and entertainment by Nancy and Tom Gallagher, who started out in their version of a stately minuet, wound up in a lively jitterbug. An exhibition tango was danced by Nicky and Francene Zaria who danced on the Nieuw Amsterdam's South American cruise last winter when Mr. and Mrs. Davies were aboard.

Among those in the square dancing set last summer at Camp Topridge were Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson, Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark, Gen. and Mrs. Wade Haislip, Gen. and Mrs. Virgil Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt, Mrs. Davies Fitch and Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings.

AMONG THOSE WHO WENT square dancing last night were the Belgian Ambassador Baron Robert Silvercruys, Gen. and Mrs. Omar Bradley, Mrs. Max Truitt, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Roberts, the Brazilian Ambassador Mauricio Nabuco, Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan, Senator and Mrs. Clinton Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, Col. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Undersecretary of State and Mrs. James Webb, Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Edward H. Foley, jr., J. Harry Covington 3d, Marvin Coles, Marvin Braverman.

Eleven tables were set up for supper with a host at each. Mrs. Davies presided at one, Mr. Davies at another. Others were Senator Millard Tydings, Mrs. Tydings, Mrs. Davies Fitch, Col. Alden Sibley, Mrs. Perle Mesta, Mrs. Wade Haislip, Senora de Huertematte and Mrs. Anderson.

County fare eaten with relish included roast beef hash with poached eggs, chicken pot pie, ham, potato salad, popovers, raspberry bombe and fruit compote on illuminated ice.

Style Show Stars Working Gal

By Evelyn Hayes

"THE WOMAN WHO WORKS" was the star of Hecht's fashion show yesterday at 4:30 p. m. Featured were dresses for all hours on both a working and social calendar—with special emphasis on suits and dresses that serve more than one purpose in a busy woman's wardrobe.

Pictured here are two versions of a suit that is a wardrobe in itself. Composed of a jacket, a reversible waistcoat and three skirts (yes three), it is made in a choice of two rayon suitings—one that looks like gray flannel, the other a smart tattersall weave. The two extra skirts in both cases are made of red butcher linen and navy blue rayon gabardine—a skirt to match each side of the reversible sparkle-studded waistcoat. Priced at a remarkable $35 for one whole ensemble in either fabric.

Also pictured is a well-cut natural wool dress that can go to work or to a smart business luncheon accessorized with fake leopard accessories, or could go all out for glamour via black velvet and pearls for a late day cocktail party. The career girls in the audience liked the $17.95 price tag, too!

Mother-in-Law Shakes Woman's Confidence in Her Child Training Theories; Her Teen-Age Daughters Are Individualists, and Grandma Disapproves This

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A recent visit from my mother-in-law—I shall call her Mrs. B.—has raised a doubt in my mind concerning my policy with my two teenage daughters. I believe I am doing the right thing, but I would like to have your opinion.

Betty and Jean are 14 and 16, respectively; and as different in looks and disposition as two sisters could possibly be. It seems that Mrs. B has always longed for twins in the family, and when my girls were small she made identical clothes for them. She was quite disappointed when they started to assert individual tastes and wanted to dress differently. Beginning then, I no longer made them dress alike and I let them fix their hair as they wished. I'd been keeping it in braids for more than a year just to please Mrs. B.

Now in high school, the girls have entirely different tastes and interests. I encourage them in every possible way to be sisterly, but I let them go with their separate friends and follow their own interests. When Mrs. B. was here a few weeks ago, she was much concerned about this. She thought I shouldn't let the girls go anywhere if they weren't invited together. But I think it would be wrong to force that sort of thing. I've noticed in the last year that they seem to be drawing together naturally and I feel they will continue this trend as they get older.

I had an older sister who matured earlier than I, and my parents used to make her take me along on dates, much to our mutual displeasure. It created bad feeling between us that lasted for years.

Our third child is a boy, younger than the girls, and Mrs. B. has accused me at times of being partial to one or the other. Of course there are times when one child may get more attention than the others, but I love them all equally and don't feel any partiality, and they've never felt slighted.

Mrs. B. has a favorite phrase, "Of course it's none of my business, but—" and she seems to delight in stirring up minor conflicts. Fortunately for me, she now lives in a distant city and visits us only occasionally. But do you know of anything more I can do to help my daughters to be closer companions? D. L.

DEAR D. L.: Obviously you are a more sensitive person, in a healthier way, than your mother-in-law will ever be. You have a far finer feeling for human beings than she possesses. You have the capacity for putting yourself in the other fellow's shoes and vicariously sharing his emotional reactions to specific experiences. That is why you can be right in rearing your daughters and yet be disturbed by Mrs. B.'s criticism of your sensibly considerate child-training policies.

In my opinion, you deserve praise, not blame, for helping the girls develop distinctive traits of personality within the family and within the framework of rational behavior—by giving them some leeway for self-expression in dress and by letting them enroll as individuals in their separately chosen teen-age groups. I can think of no better way to nurture sturdy growth of self-reliant character, and happy cooperative disposition in them.

Speaking from my own experience in watching the growth of children, I agree with your thought that sisters tend to manifest more genuine sympathy with each other's tastes in friends, intellectual interests, social activities, etc., if their parents permit each of them adequate pasturage for kicking up their heels as individualists throughout their formative years. When they aren't pushed together, nor disciplined to be carbon copies of each other, there is indeed that trend you mention of "drawing together naturally" in adolescence. Perhaps at that age they begin to feel closer to each other, ideologically, than to their parents, who represent "the older generation."

As for Mrs. B.'s exertions to keep your daughters dressed alike in early years, there is no denying that little sisters decked out in identical garb are an eye-stopping spectacle—indubitably more picturesque than if they go forth in miscellaneous raiment.

However, that type of dress for children is invariably more pleasing to their elders, to mummie or granny as the case may be, than to the youngsters decked out for "effect."

This I infer from the fact that most children, who feel free to speak their minds when long exposed to the experience, sooner or later make it known that they'd much prefer to wear something else—indeed almost anything for contrast to brother or sister. So I think you were keenly considerate in sparing your children frustration on this point; and such consideration tends to instill reciprocal kindliness in them. M. H.

Garden Week Satire

"Julep Time," a new musical comedy written and composed by two Richmonders, Emma Gray Trigg and Elizabeth Bull Maury, opened last evening at the WRVA Theater in Richmond. Produced by the Richmond Opera Group, the play is scheduled for performances in Richmond again this evening and tomorrow evening.

The operetta is a rollicking account of Garden Week in Virginia, with ancestors and flower enthusiasts sharing in a general ribbing.

Among the Washingtonians attending the opening were Col. and Mrs. Alf Heiberg, Col. and Mrs. Dorris A. Hanes, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wahl, Col. and Mrs. Pratt Brown, Capt. and Mrs. Joseph Toth, and Mrs. Helen Bull.

Supple Waist Can Be Kept By Exercising

By Ida Jean Kain

NATURE DESIGNED the waist to be the slenderest part of the silhouette . . . and certainly a slim, supple waist makes for a young-looking figure. Wait! Don't turn away discouraged. Anybody can keep, or recapture, a neat, sweet waist. While a thickening through the middle is characteristic of the middle-age figure, it is by no means inevitable.

No glamour girl in Hollywood, middle age to the contrary, has a waist that measures more than 26½ inches . . . or if she does, it's a cinch it's a secret.

THE TEST IS this: If your weight is normal and your waistline is no more than two inches larger than it was when you waltzed down the aisle . . . congratulations, you deserve an orchid too.

None of us needs a tape measure to tell when the waist is slipping. A skirtband that's a mite tight is fair warning. Here are the measures that help recapture the wedding-ring waist—pull up with the lower abdominal muscles, hold, pull the waist away from the hips. To keep that pulled-slim effect, put tone in the muscles that hug the waist and span the abdomen. Easy exercise will do it . . .

Position. Stand tall with arms arched overhead, fingers interlaced, palms turned upward.

Movement: Starting with the lower abdominal muscles, pull firmly up and in—feel the lift all through the midsection. Now push palms of hands toward the ceiling — s-t-r-e-t-c-h. Relax and stretch again, a half-dozen times. Then, still holding the upstretch through the middle, arms arched overhead, clasp left wrist with right hand and slowly bend to the right . . . pull with the right hand and stretch all along the left side. Back to center and bend to the right again, 6 to 8 times. Now clasp right wrist with left hand and bend to the left, stretching along the right side. It even feels streamlining.

Position: Kneel on floor and sit back on heels, with arms out at sides at shoulder level. Again pull up-and-in snugly with middle muscles and hold the upstretch.

Movement: Bend slowly to the left, touching fingers of left hand to floor at side. Back to center and bend to the right, touching right fingers to floor. Be sure to hold with the abdominal muscles.

Childhood May Be Over, But the Memory Lingers In Adult Party Games

"THE HILD is father of the man," as Wordsworth one remarked, and many childhood tastes persist, even as we pace on toward middle age. A liking for an occasional evening of parlor games is one of these. E. W. writes:

DEAR NNE:

We are giving a party soon for some friends who do not play bridge. I was wondering if you could sugest some games for this group—things on the oder of charades, or "20 Questions," but with a little different twist, something that would amuse adults. E. W., Washington.

Here re several possibilities, as outlined in "Home Entertaining," by Charlotte Adams (Crown).

IMITATIONS—Each guest is given a pencil and a small pce of paper on which to write the name of an actor or actress. He folds the paper, and puts it with all the other folded papers in a hat or on a table. Each guest in turn then picks up one of the papers and is obliged to do an imitation of the actor or actress whose name he has drawn while other guests try to guess who he is. The first person to guess wins. A running score is kept, the highest winning the game.

SECRET FORMULA—One unsuspecting and good-natured guest must volunteer to be the "goat." He or she leaves the room. Each of the rest agrees to be the person on his left. That is, if asked a question, he will answer it truthfully just as the person on his left would answer it. The questioner is called back and told that everyone will answer him truthfully but according to a certain formula. Results are often ludicrous, especially when questions are of a personal nature, and the questioner becomes more and more confused.

ALPHABET GAME—Here is an interesting oral game for small groups which requires a little thought on the part of the players. A letter is chosen—say the letter "D"—and pairs of two-word expressions must be given by each guest in turn, the first expression beginning with "A" and "D," the second with "B" and "D," and so on through the alphabet, always keeping the second word in the group beginning with "D." Here is the way it might work. The first player will start off with "Anno Domini," the second might say "Bad Debts," the third "Can't Do," and the fourth "Devil's Disciple," and so on through the alphabet. Anyone missing out is out of the game. Half a minute is allowed for each answer.

. . . In New York

One, Two, Three, Kick!

The Ladies of the Chorus are always good copy . . . Over at this desk, we mean . . . There are more than 10,000 of them in the Nation's night clubs, earning an average of $75 weekly . . . The best-looking ones, according to Broadway showmen, hail from Texas with New York a distant second and California and Florida runnerups . . . A good figure is not the prime requisite, they add, quoting Flo Ziegfeld, who once estimated 90 percent is Personality. Ziegfeld paid some of his show-girls as high as $600 a week because they had their own "following" of Daddies . . . The average chorine spends a dozen years studying dancing. Compare this with the average doctor, who spends that much time studying medicine . . . The IQ among today's charmers is higher than ever. Geraldine Linn, one of the shapelier sirens now in a Broadway nightspot, teaches psychology at a swank private school here . . . Buci Hegyi, a titian-haired Texan in "Peep Show," goes to Columbia University. Majoring in English and history. Wants to be a college prof. . . . Ellen Pope recently deserted the Copa line to resume at college. Her specialty is mathematics. Her idea of glamour is to be a distaff Einstein.

Despite all the talk about chorus girls marrying millionaires, less than 4 percent wed outside show business. The lucky lads who get them are the young, struggling actors, songwriters, musicians and newspapermen . . . Ex-chorine Rose Granlund, once married to N.T.G., is now selling theater tickets at the Hotel Statler . . . Polly Lux, a Ziegfeld grad, became a millionaire via Florida realty . . . Madeline Ruffolo, who sparkled in the ensembles during the first Big War, now is the wardrobe mistress at the Latin Quarter. Her name there is Madeline Crawford . . . Marion Martin, one of the great beauties, was constantly pursued by millionaires, but she never married. She is in Hollywood playing siren roles.

The famed Cotton Club in Harlem offered a chorus girl who is now a star, Lena Horne . . . Edna Mae Holly, another beauty there, is Mrs. Sugar Ray Robinson . . . Louie Armstrong's lovely bride, Lucille, was a Cotton Clubeaut . . . But then there's Margaret Boujai, one of the most fabled from that show, who is a Macy's salesgirl today. And you can see Carolyn Rich at Altman's ribbon counter . . . Two midtown ladies who were dancing stars in England are Marion Alexander and "Agnes." They are wardrobe mistresses at the Copa and Diamond Horseshoe . . . Junior Jackson of the Riviera shows owns a pedigreed dog kennel. Gets $75 per pup . . . When Patrice Wymore hoofed in Broadway choruses she was so nearsighted she bumped into the girls during numbers. So they promoted her to dancer and she clicked in two Tony Farrell flops. A film contract followed and along came Errol Flynn, whose wife she is now.

One of the lovelies in the Used-to-Be (and probably to this day) was partly responsible for Will Rogers finding his forte. Rogers' act was with this beautiful show girl. A manager told Will the girl detracted from his rope-twirling and quips, to get rid of her and single it. As a result, Dorothy Knapp returned to the line . . . Show girls, like ballplayers, are shipped to the minor leagues after they hit around 30 . . . In the hinterland places there are scores of well-preserved dolls of 35 and 40 . . . In some Yiddish Theaters on the lower East Side many chorines are grandmothers! That's because their union hands out jobs by seniority and the older hangers-on are first to be hired. (I like the grandmaw 3d from the left!)

The producers of "Bless You All" took big adverts in the papers recently appealing for beautiful people, offering each $150 per week. That's probably top coin for show gels since Ziegfeld . . . One of the reasons these showmen are having difficulty finding the types they want is that many of the dolls are bypassing the musical shows for TV assignments, which are more generous . . . Barbara Trelease, for example, got $75 weekly (8 performances) in revues, but she rates $125 just to hoof in the line once a week on "The Hit Parade." Barbara also gets an additional $100 appearing on 3 commercials . . . Kaja Sundsten's legs model'd the block-long leg which fronts the Winter Garden. Her enemies in the M. Todd hit insist Mary Thomas' pins are superior.

No chorus dancing line in the world, they say, can match the precision prancing of the Rockettes at the Music Hall . . . Some of the reasons the Music Hall gets the top dancers: It features a cafeteria, a preview room, a chiropodist and a fully-equipped hospital backstage. The Rockettes consist of 36 girls. But few outsiders know there are ackchelly 46 in the troupe. Ten are always on vacation in rotation . . . When Arlene Dahl chorine'd at the Latin Quarter 5 years ago she was considered "oof'ly dull" by her colleagues because she rarely entered discussions, panned anybody, or had much to say. Today Arlene is one of the most vivacious of the Hollywood attractions . . . The only chorus girls who have to serve as their own stagehands are the ice-skaters. They place their own props on the ice because stagehands refuse to risk doing that job . . . Talent scouts who witnessed the recent "Miss America" pageant at Atlantic City report none of them rated a spot in any of the Broadway musical shows.

The experts on such matters say chorus girls make the best wives. They are superbly disciplined, become extremely domesticated and their figures remain whistleable for eons . . . The fellow who sends lavish gifts is invariably considered a sap. You can wager the one who takes her around the corner to the cafeteria is her True Love . . . Never call a chorine "blondie." It makes her see purple . . . Many of them dream of landing in Hollywood, but not Beth Douglas, who went there, was featured in two films and could have signed for more. But she deserted Movietown and is now in the chorus at "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Beth insists the cry of "Curtain!" is more exciting than "Camera!"

In the old days the Stage Door Johnny was expected to show up with white orchids plus a gift, or not at all. Today the kerrickters who congest the "Peep Show" stage entrance look as though they came from some poolroom . . . Many of the girls are so near-sighted they get the reputation of being snobs and at chorus calls often do not recognize friends. That's because the dears simply will not wear their specs at calls . . . Chorus calls are usually set for 10 a. m. on the theory that a gal who can look good in the glare of early morning will look positively gorgeous under the spot-and-footlights . . . When a chorine tells her undressingroomates a guy is a "Roman" she is tipping them off that he has trouble with his hands . . . Our pet Broadway Confucius belongs here, to wit: Beware Of Cutie With Baby Stare. Safer To Sit In Electric Chair!

Geologists Start 63d Convention

Some 2000 geologists from United States, Canada and Mexico will begin meetings here today to start the three-day, sixty-third annual meetings of the Geological Society of America.

Hosts to the visitors will be four local geological organizations, the Geological Society of Washington, the Paleontological Society of Washington, the Petrologist Club and the Pick and Hammer Club.

Associated societies meeting with the convention body, with headquarters at the Statler Hotel, are the Mineralogical Society of America, the Paleontological Society, and the Society of Vertebrate Paleontology.

Three medals for distinguished scientific research will be awarded during the sessions, one to a Washington geologist. They include the Geological Society's Penrose Medal to Dr. M. E. Wilson, of the Geological Survey of Canada, and the Day Medal to Professor Francis Birch, of Harvard University.

The Roebling Medal of the Mineralogical Society of America will be presented to Dr. N. L. Bowen, of 3 East Kirke st., Chevy Chase, Md., who has been associated with the Geophysical Laboratory of the Carnegie Institution here, since 1912.

The fun event of the annual meeting will be staged both Friday and Saturday nights in Lisner Auditorium of George Washington University with the annual extravaganza of the Pick and Hammer Club.

More serious matters of the convention will be the scientific reports, which this year will vary from new data on fossil man in southwestern North America to laboratory-produced deformation of rock as it would occur some 20 miles beneath the earth's surface.

Southern Group Elects West Virginia Doctor

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 15 (AP).—Dr. R. J. Wilkinson of Huntington, W. Va., was named president-elect of the Southern Medical Association at the group's annual convention today.

Dr. Curtice Rosser of Dallas, Tex., was installed as president. Other officers elected included Dr. Walter C. Jones of Miami, first vice president; Dr. Edwin C. Ernst, St. Louis, second vice president, and Dr. F. A. Holden of Baltimore, chairman of the council.

The Twitching Hour

Hard of Sleeping? Just Try This One

By Sonia Stein

THE NEW "Sleep Show" on WMAL may not be uniquely soporific, but it's unique in this respect: It is probably the only show on the air which advises—nay, commands—that the listener shut the radio off just before the final commercial.

FRIEND

Quelle clever show, you might suppose. Actually it will have limited appeal. It's for the hard-of-sleeping, who need to be droned to sleep by a soothing voice which gives instructions on muscular relaxation. Robert L. Friend, a man of many parts—being part magician, part mindreader and part hypnotist—does the job, using none of these talents. He just drones along, something else at which he's fairly adept.

(The sponsor naturally has a stake in running this particular kind of show. He sells gadgets which shut off the radio if you nod off while it's still on. Needless to say, the closing commercial isn't a hard-selling one, just a bit of prestige conversation.)

The show is spotted weekday nights at midnight—the twitching hour—and runs for 10 minutes. If you're not done in by then, you're beyond the ministrations of our Friend.

If your problem is primarily relaxation of the laugh muscles, you might try our Beanbag, Jerry Lester, on WNBW, at 11 p.m. Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays. That's a superlatively relaxed type of comedy.

And if that won't do it, you'll have to wait until once a month and catch the Dean Martin-Jerry Lewis comedy show (every fourth Sunday on WNBW, 8 p.m.) Leaves you limp, I guarantee, or your sleeping pills back at no extra cost.

WTOP is busting its buttons with pardonable pride: It seems that the Pulse Survey for the September-October period shows that Washington's 50,000-watt station is broadcasting 9 out of 10 of the top-rated evening shows, 9 out of 10 out of the top 10 Monday-Friday daytime shows. TOP stands for more than top of the dial, eh kids?

DEAR SANTA CLAUS:

No shillyshallying or delays from me this year. Here's what I want. There's a new thing out which has:

A 19-inch television picture tube.

Standard and FM radio.

A three-way automatic phonograph which plays all sized and speeds of phonograph records—45s, 33 1/3s and 78s.

A storage compartment for records.

A high-fidelity tape recorder which can record anything at all, including radio or television programs being received on the set.

A timeclock which can be set to turn any of the apparatus on or off automatically, even when you are not home. (This device I have named for short the how-to-catch-the-Phil-Harris-radio-show-and-watch-television-at-the-same-time or the even-be-at-the-movies-or-asleep device.)

Three loudspeakers for super-duper sound reproduction.

A plaque on which the set may be personalized with a name.

The whole business comes packaged in an eighteenth century English hand-rubbed mahogany credenza, or in blond hardwood, with double breakfront doors.

The only hitch, Santa, is that DuMont Laboratories, Inc., has set no price on the little dear yet.

Prince Georges Zone Hearing Draws 300

State Hearing

Annexation Law Change Suggested

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 15 (AP)—The troublesome annexation question—for years a legislative hot potato—got another airing here today before the Legislative Commission studying the impact of urban growth on rural areas.

At a public hearing held in the Senate chamber at the Capitol, the commission created by the 1950 General Assembly heard both city and county spokesmen and generally agree that some changes are needed in the present annexation statute.

Just what these changes should be, however, was a matter involving a wide difference of opinion.

Generally speaking, the "city boys" favored retention — with minor changes—of the present system whereby annexation cases are heard and determined by three judge courts designated by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

On the other hand, people taking the side of the counties argued that the present law is obsolete and urged that the commission recommend amending the law to permit the people in an area to vote on whether or not they preferred to live under a county or city government.

The two viewpoints were presented in concrete proposals by committees from the League of Virginia Municipalities and the League of Virginia Counties respectively.

Before a packed house, the Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday held their last zoning hearings before going out of office December 5.

More than 300 persons crammed into the hearing room in the County Service Building in Hyattsville as the commissioners approved 13 applications, turned down two and postponed action on another.

Some 200 of the spectators appeared to protest one industrial zoning application filed by T. Raymond Burch, a member of the House of Delegates, who was defeated with the majority of the other Democratic candidates in last week's elections.

The commissioners refused Burch's application to transfer from residential to industrial listing 30 acres of ground in Daniels Park subdivision of College Park next to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Burch said he had no definite plans for the land, but wished to change its classification in order to negotiate its sale or lease.

The opponents, paced by Attorney J. Edwin Hutchinson and John Grasso, president of the Hollywood Civic Association, protested the change for a number of reasons, including (1) reduction of property values and (2) creation of parking and traffic hazards.

Children Run Library At Industrial Home

A new library, to be staffed by children was opened yesterday at the Industrial Home School, 2453 Wisconsin ave. nw.

John F. Cairns, superintendent, said the library contains 600 to 700 books, many of them donated from the community.

Children yesterday gave a tea for the school staff to mark the opening of the library and to celebrate National Book Week.

Conservative Rabbi Proposes Merger of All U. S. Synagogues

A call for a united Jewish community was made last night at the opening sessions of the biennial convention of the United Synagogue of America.

Dr. Solomon Goldman of Chicago, who delivered the keynote address, declared that "If Judaism tomorrow is to be less confusing, controversial, competitive and wasteful, then the United Synagogue and other Synagogal bodies in the land will have to regain and reclaim their rightful place in the community."

Dr. Goldman proposed "that our several thousand congregational units or, to begin with, our own several hundred be coordinated and merged into a national Synagogue."

Other proposals he advanced were:

"That the objectives, goals and tasks of the major Jewish organizations be studied with a view to determining whether they are so at variance that they cannot be made the responsibility of one properly organized departmentalized body.

"That we re-examine the training of the American rabbi to determine whether a multiplicity of functions have not tended to make him the best third-rater in the land, whether it is humanly possible for him to perform them all."

Samuel Rothstein, president of the United Synagogue, recommended that the United Synagogue, "together with the Rabbinical Assembly of America and the Jewish Theological Seminary, establish a commission to explore the possibility and advisability of creating a world movement of conservative Judaism."

Samuel Rothstein, president of the group, told a press conference that the organization would consider a stand against the McCarran anti-subversive measure and urge that the Voice of America include daily scriptural readings on its broadcasts.

In preconference activity, Dr. Simon Greenberg, executive director, presented an "eternal light" for the chapel at Arlington National Cemetery. Such a light hangs in every synagogue before the Arch of the Law, symbolizing the everlasting light of God and the light of the law.

A dedicatory service at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier followed, with a wreath laid on the tomb. Later a delegation visited Jewish war veterans at Walter Reed Hospital.

More than 800 laymen from 500 conservative congregations throughout the country are attending the five-day conference which opened at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

The conservative movement is one of the three major branches of the Jewish church in America, and represents a compromise between Orthodox and Reform movements. Roughly one quarter of the Hebrew Congregations in the United States are united through the Synagogue organization.

Red Fight Termed Vital For Catholics

Catholic interests are "vitally involved" in America's overseas programs combatting Communist aggression, 180 visiting Roman Catholic bishops were told yesterday.

The Most Rev. Francis P. Keough, Archbishop of Baltimore, said that "the minds and souls of man" are targets of international action today, and that the Catholic Church is "greatly concerned in preventing the imposition of secular patterns in this effort."

In a yearly report given as acting chairman of the conference's administrative board, the archbishop cited the Marshall Plan, the Point Four program, the Voice of America, UNESCO and international health movements as being "of particular interest to Catholics."

Department Work Reported

His address was to the opening session of the bishop's annual three-day meeting at Catholic University.

Highlights of Archbishop Keough's review of various units of the welfare conference:

The National Council of Catholic Men, which federates 11 national and 3000 local groups, has decided to enter the television field.

The legal department reported that United States courts "have been reluctant to use the March, 1948, McCollum Case decision of the Supreme Court as a wedge between government and religion."

In their annual statement in 1948, the Catholic bishops criticized this decision, which threw out a released time religious education program in Champaign, Ill., public schools.

3,500,000 In Parochial Schools

The education department reported that enrollment in Catholic schools would reach 3,500,000 this term, and predicted that in the next five years 250 million dollars would be spent for new and improved Catholic school buildings.

The Confraternity of Christian Doctrine is giving religious instruction to more than 1,500,000 children attending public schools.

A committee of Catholic Biblical scholars commissioned by the confraternity is readying new translations of the Old Testament books of Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy and Eccleisastics.

The National Catholic Community Service, a member agency of the Associated Services for Armed Forces, has 30 clubs and offices in operation to meet the off-base spiritual and recreational needs of service personnel.

The Family Life Bureau distributed more than 15,000 copies of its publications.

Va. Builder Pleads Guilty Of Larceny

Lucian M. Downing, Arlington home builder, has pleaded guilty of grand larceny of $3000 in connection with a customer's complaint that Downing promised to build a house but never did.

The Arlington commonwealth's attorney's office said Downing's attorney, Edward Hall, entered the plea for his client November 2. Downing, when indicted October 16, pleaded innocent.

Arlington Circuit Court Judge William D. Medley deferred sentencing until December 18 pending a probation report on Downing by Chief Probation Officer C. T. Booth.

The warrant charging Downing with larceny was sworn out by Herman L. Croom of 2 Ashby st., Alexandria.

The builder, who lives at 3712 N. 18th st., also faces 13 civil suits totaling $12,700 in connection with his building activities.

Montgomery Lists 79th Polio Case

The Montgomery County Health Deparment reported the 79th case of polio in the county yesterday. The victim was a seven-year-old girl in the 500 block of Sligo Creek Parkway, Takoma Park. She was taken to Children's Hospital.

Church Social Role Stressed At Convocation

The church's responsibility for social welfare was stressed in second-day activities of Howard University's thirty-fourth annual religious convocation yesterday.

Dr. John C. Bennett said "Christian love seeks to deliver nations everywhere from such burdens as poverty, discrimination on account of race, from political oppression and from the cruelty and moral perversion of war."

The professor of Christian ethics at Union Theological Seminary in New York told 100 visiting delegates that "The Federal Council of Churches was actually honored by opposition of the reactionary groups who oppose Christian concern for social welfare."

Last night Howard President Mordecai W. Johnson addressed his twenty-fourth annual convocation banquet.

In his talk he said western Christianity is "like a community that had been inoculated with a prophylactic dose of Christianity. It has made itself apparently immune to a big, passionate dose of it."

"The Christian community has a world-embracing purpose," Dr. Johnson said, "to bring the whole of human life into a society informed by radically sincere reverence for the individual human being in all of his relations."

The three-day meeting ends today.

60 Lutherans Attend Clerical Retreat Here

Sixty Lutheran chaplains attended their first postwar retreat in Christ Lutheran Church, 16th and Gallatin sts. nw. yesterday.

Sponsored by the Armed Services Commission of the church, the retreat was open to all Missouri Synod Lutheran chaplains stationed east of the Mississippi.

The Rev. William F. Bruening, pastor of the host church, was celebrant for the opening holy communion service. The retreat was conducted by Dr. Richard R. Caemmerer, professor of homoletics at Concordia Theological Seminary, St. Louis.

The two-day meeting will conclude with a training conference today.

New Antibiotic Proves Aid in Colitis Cases

Another stubborn ailment of man—ulcerative colitis—is yielding to the relatively new antibiotic, chloromycetin, it is reported by a New York internist.

Sixteen of 24 patients suffering from the chronic intestinal disorder showed moderate to marked improvement in a month or less of the drug treatment, according to a report by Dr. Zacharias T. Bercovitz, assistant clinical professor at Cornell University.

The report is published in the current issue of Gastroenterology, official publication of that subspecialty of internal medicine.

Dr. Bercovitz noted that 13 patients improved markedly and "had prompt and often dramatic decline in the number of bowel movements," decreasing from 40 to 50 a day to three or four a day, within two days of the treatment's start.

From a clinical standpoint, their condition after the treatment was described as "essentially normal."

Less dramatic improvement, but substantial, was recorded for 11 patients. The remaining eight, while evidencing mild benefit at first, showed no permanent improvement the doctor reported.

"Chloromycetin therapy," he wrote, "is of definite value (in ulcerative colitis), not alone in the initial treatment period but in subsequent relapses as well."

No individual relapsed to the level of original severity of his disease, he noted.

Expert Declares Child Stutterers Have Stage Fright

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 15 (AP). If your child stutters, says a speech correctionist, he's probably just suffering the way daddy did in his first public speech.

Mary Frances Dahl, who helps children with speech defects for the Anne Arundel County Board of Education, gave a local civic club this analysis:

"The stutterer is usually an intelligent person, who when trying to speak, experiences in a manifold manner the feelings that an amateur experiences when called upon to make a formal address."

Cathedral Fund Campaign Ended

Washington Cathedral's local building and maintenance campaign ended officially yesterday with 95 percent of its goal.

A. Lloyd Symington, general chairman, announced a total of $47,672 collected during the five-week drive. Symington said the campaign would not be extended and added there were enuogh pledges pending to meet the goal.

The figures were given at a final report meeting held in the library of Washington Cathedral.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 15 (AP).—The bull market in soybeans rolled along today despite some pretty hefty profit-taking and lower quotations for vegetable oils.

All soybean contracts eked out new seasonal highs on the Board of Trade. December oats also made a seasonal top, while May equalled its previous peak. Only corn lagged in a market which, although not spectacularly strong, showed underlying strength all day.

Wheat closed ⅛ to 2 cents higher, corn ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher, oats ⅞-1⅛ higher, rye 2¼-2⅞ higher, soybeans 3 to 3¼ higher and lard 5 cents lower to 20 cents a hundred pounds higher.

A. T. & T. Votes Billion Dollar Finance Plan

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—A billion-dollar financing program was approved today by stockholders of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The program is designed to enable the Bell System's individual telephone companies to meet the continuing demand for new telephones.

The action is an authorization and actual details of the financing will be subject to later action by the board of directors. However, in the proxy statement, Leroy A. Wilson, president, had observed that further financing probably will be required sometime during the first six months of 1951.

The program contains these points:

1. An increase in the authorized capital stock of the company from forty-five million shares (of $100 par value each).

2. Authorization of a new issue of convertible debentures in an an amount not to exceed 435 million dollars.

3. A new employes' stock plan under which up to three million shares of stock may be sold to employes of the company and its subsidiaries.

The new 45-million-share ceiling on capital stock would more than cover the shares required to redeem the convertible debentures and the three million shares offered to employes.

Although the present limit is 35 million shares, only some 28 million were issued and outstanding as of August 31. However, 5,007,000 additional shares had to be reserved for issuance upon conversion of debentures of three outstanding issues, and 1,645,000 more shares reserved under elections to purchase under the existing employe stock purchasing plan.

The Bell System already has spent five billion dollars in its expansion program since the war in the largest undertaking by a single corporate enterprise in history. New construction is continuing at a rate of nearly a billion dollars a year.

Leroy A. Wilson, A. T. and T. president, said there are still 800,000 people waiting for telephones and 1,700,000 customers now on party lines who have asked for higher classes of service.

Directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.25 a share, calling for a cash disbursement of some $63,765,000.

The dividend is the 119th consecutive payment at the rate of $2.25 a quarter—$9 a year. It is payable January 15, 1951, to stockholders of record December 15.

The checks will go to 982,000 stockholders. A. T. and T. has 28,343,000 shares of stock outstanding.

Wholesale Food Index Again Up

The Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index climbed sharply this week to $6.58—highest since September 26, but still well below the year's high of $6.69 on August 29.

The index compared with $6.52 last week and was 15.8 percent above the year-ago level of $5.68. The index represents the total cost at wholesale of a pound each of 31 foods in general use.

Higher in the wholesale cost this week were wheat, corn, oats, beef, hams, jellies, lard, butter, coffee, cottonseed oil, cocoa, eggs, rice, raisins, steers and lambs.

Lower were flour, rye, barley, peanuts, currants and hogs.

Empire Steel Plans 10 Million Expansion

MANSFIELD, Ohio, Nov. 15 (AP). The Empire Steel Corp. of Mansfield today announced a 10-million-dollar expansion program which is designed to hike ingot capacity 20 percent.

Empire President Don W. Frease said the program would turn the Mansfield plant into a heavy hot roll strip coil mill.

The rolling capacity of the present plant is 21,000 tons a month. The new construction, which will begin at once, will make possible a potential rolling of 45,000 tons a month.

Niagara Hudson Acts

Niagara Hudson Power Corp. advises its common stock holders that all outstanding shares of common and scrip will be exchangeable into common and scrip of Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. beginning December 4.

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP).—Cotton futures turned strong today, with final prices 95 cents to $2.50 a bale higher. Mills covered a large volume of contracts, spurred by prospects of a scarcity of desirable cotton next spring. Commission house and local buying was touched for the same reason and there were expectations of additional strength in futures soon, through covering against export sales.

Year's Retail Sales in Area At 1.5 Billion

By S. Oliver Goodman

The rapid growth of the Washington metropolitan area during the past decade is graphically shown in sales figures supplied yesterday by Sales Management, a magazine.

Total retail sales for the area in 1949 were estimated at $1,540,551,000, a gain of 222 percent over 1939 as compared with a national increase of 205 percent.

Recently, Dun & Bradstreet estimated that the District of Columbia alone had estimated sales of $1,118,777,000 in 1949.

Food sales of $345,869,000 were 210 percent ahead of 1939. General merchandise sales of $211,524,000 showed a gain of 192 percent. Drug sales of $71,396,000 increased 156 percent. Furniture-household-radio sales amounted to $71,391,000, up 305 percent. Automotive sales of $269,595,000 gained 342 percent.

The Washington metropolitan area is defined as including Montgomery, Prince Georges, Arlington and Fairfax counties.

This brought local furniture sales for the first nine months to 14 percent above the like 1949 period. Both dividends are payable December 29 to stock of record December 20. President John A. Reilly said this will bring total payments for 1950 to $6 a share, representing a 12 percent return on the stock's par value. Last year, 10 percent was paid. Recently the bank voted to all officers and employes a bonus of one month's salary and put $150,000 in surplus account.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

We Can't Stop With the Job Two-Thirds Done

One of the many Community Chest services that the public seldom hears about is a Speaker's Service available to all Red Feather agencies. (Call Decatur 7330, extension 50.)

A few days ago, the Rev. R. Edward Dowdy of First Baptist Church, made a wonderful talk to a group of Government workers. In part, he said this:

"When I was pastor of a small church in Virginia, one of our members had the misfortune of having his house burn down. Almost to a man, everybody in the neighborhood pitched in to help that unfortunate family get enough furniture to start housekeeping again.

"In another case, a man was sick for a long time one spring. A group of us went over to his farm and worked for several days getting everything caught up. When our neighbor came home from the hospital, his farm was in the same condition that it would have been had he been working all the time.

"That kind of cooperation is impossible in a large city like Washington. But, in reality, we do the same things through our Red Feather services.

"The Community Chest is a miracle of American life. You will find nothing like it any place in the world.

"One night, a group of us who have enlisted in the Speakers Service went out to dinner at St. Joseph's Home and School, a Catholic orphanage for boys, one of the 105 agencies supported through our cooperation in giving to the Red Feather campaign.

"At my table, I sat across from the wife of one of the Justices of the Supreme Court. Sitting next to her was a worker from the Jewish Community Center. Alongside me was a Negro Y. M. C. A. secretary. At the end of the table was a Methodist steward who confessed to having missed a meeting in his own church in order to be there.

"Sitting there, I, a Baptist preacher, thought: 'Where else in all the world could a miracle like this happen?' As the Catholic sister went around the table pouring coffee in our cups, I picked up a little Red Feather which was lying on the table, and I proudly wore it, as a symbol of the kind of community which is possible only here in America—where people of so many different and divergent backgrounds can share, because of their common concern for people in need, and for building the right kind of character in our young people."

Our community's Red Feather chest is little more than 60 percent filled.

Being in a position to give—while so many of our neighbors must depend on our generosity—makes us the most fortunate people in the world.

Isn't it about time we were filling our Community Chest, so that 105 of our agencies can get on with the work we want them to do?

If you haven't been solicited yet, or would like to increase your pledge, there's a very simple way to take direct action. Call Decatur 7330. And right now would be a fine time to do it.

COINCIDENCE DEPT.

J. Denis Sartain, WWDC news editor, started his working career in a drug store and to this day remains a registered pharmacist.

His station recently signed up a single sponsor for 24 hourly newscasts per day—one of the biggest such contracts ever negotiated in the radio industry. Sartain was chosen to do the newscasting.

The sponsor, appropriately enough, is Peoples Drug Stores.

With the news about war, taxes, crime, corruption and the high cost of living as rugged as it is these days, Sartain ought to drum up a pretty good aspirin business for them.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

The practice of taking care of defeated candidates at the expense of the public is indeed strange and wonderful.

Why should the public, after going to the trouble of expressing dissatisfaction with a man in public office, have to suffer him in another public office, to which he is subsequently appointed? E. M. Weeks, 3100 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Dear Mr. Weeks:

Maybe it's because when we vote one set of politicians out, we vote another set of politicians in. And the ins take care of the outs, who took care of the outs when they were the ins.

It has been suggested that one way to break the cycle is to vote for statesmen, rather than politicians. But the idea has never seemed to take hold very extensively. Bill.

P. S.: Of course we in the District can't make that mistake, because we don't vote anybody in or out. We just get the appointees.

WHY WASTE TIME?

Gladys Lawhorn of 6309 Georgia st., Chevy Chase, Md., reports that she overheard a young miss in the neighborhood protest: "But I don't wanna go to kindergarten; I wanna go to Eastern High."

EXTRA! EXTRA! TAFT AND GREEN REACH AGREEMENT

AFL President William Green says "a lot of labor men voted for Senator Taft. It is beyond my understanding."

I suspect that the Senator will agree with Mr. Green on both points.

SCAT, CAT

Harriet K. Doyle of 1731 Lyman pl. ne. heard this little jingle on the radio, and passes it along for the benefit of any District Liner who is tempted to befriend a homeless feline:

A stray cat who Came to our door
Was fed once and
We now feed four.

Election Upsets Run a Full Cycle

By Drew Pearson

Politics runs in cycles. And the political cycle a quarter of a century ago has some interesting comparisons with that today. In fact, it's almost similar.

Sen. Tydings

A quarter of a century ago, in the election of 1926, Calvin Coolidge supposedly supreme in the White House, almost lost control of Congress. He retained the Senate by exactly the same majority as Harry Truman today — one vote. The House he kept by a margin of 42. Today Truman's margin there is 34.

Some interesting figures popped up in that surprise election of 1926. A young man from Maryland named Millard Tydings, son of a Susquehanna River boatman and hitherto unknown, was elected to the Senate. A quarter of a century later, Tydings, in another surprise election, bowed out. The man who defeated him, John Marshall Butler, was equally unknown.

Another interesting figure swept into the Senate in that 1926 surprise election was a relative newcomer from Kentucky named Alben Barkley. He defeated Republican Senator Richard P. Ernst, chairman of the Privileges and Elections Committee and considered a sure bet to win.

Another upstart Democrat who surprised the Senate in 1926 was Robert Wagner of New York, a German-born boy who rose to sponsor our most important social legislation. Wagner defeated a powerful Republican leader, Senator James Wadsworth, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, who had the courage to come back to Congress in a reduced rank, as a member of the House, and this year retires from politics. This year also, Senator Herbert Lehman was elected to fill the full term of the man he succeeded, Bob Wagner.

Also swept into office in that surprise election of 1926 was a young Democrat from Oklahoma, Elmer Thomas. This year Senator Thomas bowed out.

Another young Democrat who surprised and perturbed President Coolidge was Carl Hayden of Arizona who defeated Ralph Cameron, a high-ranking Republican on the Appropriations Committee.

Even the chairman of the Republican National Committee, Senator William H. Butler of Massachusetts, the personal friend of Coolidge, was defeated that year by a young Democrat named David I. Walsh. Butler had been appointed to the Senate, following the death of Henry Cabot Lodge. And 20 years later—1946—another Henry Cabot Lodge, grandson of the old Senator, defeated Walsh, the man who defeated Butler. So goes the cycle of politics.

Coolidge, like Truman, a former Vice President, had entered the White House in 1923 through death, and—again like Truman—was easily reelected in 1924.

But the 1926 off-year election put a coalition of Democrats and Progressive Republicans in control of the Senate, just as a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats will now control under Truman. And in 1928 Coolidge decided that he did not "choose to run."

Wonder if President Truman, whose career has been strangely similar to Coolidge's, will choose likewise? Mrs. Truman very much wants him to.

NOTE—After Coolidge bowed out, the Republicans, under Herbert Hoover, were overwhelmingly elected in 1928 in the Al Smith campaign, only to loose office in 1932 and for 20 long years thereafter.

Truman's Outlook

Though the Secret Service has increased the President's bodyguard since the assassination attempt, Mr. Truman is as carefree as ever. "When the good Lord wants me, he'll take me," he tells his guards . . . A boom is already developing for Senator Clinton Anderson of New Mexico for Vice President in 1952 . . . Senator Taft's campaign was so well financed that he had $15,000 to spare for the Senate race of Lieut. Gov. Joe Hanley in New York . . . The man who is charged with keeping the Democrats in control of the Senate for the next two years is really Dr. George Calver, the Capitol physician. If one Democrat Senator dies in a GOP State it would tie the Senate; if two die the Republicans would control . . . Dr. Calver's chief health advice to aged Democrat Senators is: "Keep out of filibusters. It's too hard on the heart."

Capital Chaff

The Alderson Stenographic-Reporting Service, suspected of handing a secret Senate transcript from the Kefauver crime committee to a Chicago Sun-Times reporter by mistake, is in for investigation. This is the same company which also transcribes top-secret atomic-energy hearings . . . Some Truman advisers are convinced that the way to prepare for Truman's re-election bid in 1952 is a vigorous new program of liberal legislation. Then, if the Republican-Dixiecrat coalition blocks him, Truman will have a progressive program to run on in 1952 . . . Other advisers urge Truman to accept the olive branch from the Dixiecrats and bring unity to the Democratic Party.
